Federal Ban Is Extended

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)— President Johnson today ordered all federal steel purchases diverted from companies that have increased their prices.

The President issued the order which affects all direct and indirect federal steel purchases in a further effort to force a rollback of the price increases announced this week by several major steel companies. Earlier in the week, Johnson ordered all defense steel purchases diverted from the offending companies.

NEW ORDER

The presidential order was contained in a directive issued today by Lawson Knott, administrator of the General Services Administration. In the order Knott said:

"The national interests requires that steel and steel products be bought at the lowest possible price in view of the need to conduct government operations as economically as possible to avoid inflationary pressures on the economy."

Lawson told the government's major steel purchasing agencies to "take extraordinary precautions to assure that all direct and indirect procurements by your agency, including any grants-in-aid of steel, and steel products, be made at the lowest possible price.

SUB-CONTRACTORS

"You are further directed to make every effort to insure that your agencies, contractors and grantees adopt the same procedures with respect to their subcontractors."

Civilian departments of the government purchase approximately 5.2 million tons of steel a year at a cost of nearly $700 million. The size of the purchases by government contractors and subcontractors, and the amount of grant-in-aid purchases as state highway programs and other federally subsidized state and local projects was not immediately available from the White House.

All Quiet In Quentin Protest

A demonstration in support of a convict "Unity Day" inside San Quentin Prison, scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. today, fizzled when no one appeared.

Some prisoners, however, went ahead with their "Unity Day" plans which called for them to return to their cells after breakfast instead of going to recreation activities as usual.

Prison officials said about 2,000 men returned voluntarily and orderly to their cells today. Usually, about 1,000 return, though officials said the number varies with the weather.

Officials said most of the 1,400 men in the two honor blocks went about Saturday business and recreation as usual. The returnees were concentrated in the other blocks.

Prison officials said they expected most of the men to stay out after lunch to attend a movie planned for this afternoon.

Men scheduled to work today were on the job, officials said.

MINOR DISPLAY

A sympathy demonstration materialized briefly yesterday during a press conference at the gates of San Quentin. The real one had been scheduled for 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today.

A newly formed "Committee for the Rights of the Imprisoned" called yesterday's conference to give its grounds for the protest, but representatives of other radical and new politics groups took the occasion to give their views.

ASSEMBLY BOWS TO BILL LOGJAM

Lower House Votes To Return Sept. 2; Senate Decision Due This Afternoon

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Legislature virtually abandoned hopes of adjourning its seven-month-long session today after failing to agree on key issues of school aid and property tax relief.

The Assembly voted to recess the session from today until Sept. 2, when it would try again to settle major issues. There was no immediate indication whether the Senate, which hadn't met yet, would go along.

The Legislature must take some action allocating $155 million in property tax cuts by Oct. 1 or the state sales tax drops back from 5 cents on the dollar to 4½ cents.

Meanwhile, many Republicans already had left for Miami Beach, Fla., and the GOP National Convention, and 21 Democratic lawmakers will go to their convention later in the month.

Democrats blamed the Reagan administration for helping kill a last-ditch attempt to meet the pledge of property tax relief.

The Senate rejected 14-20 early this morning a $289 million package patched together in the Assembly only hours before and rushed to the Senate on a "take-it-or-leave-it" basis on a 54-14 vote.

Senators branded the move "legislative blackmail."

Another roadblock to adjournment, which lawmakers hoped would come some time today, was the continued stalemate over a solution to the $144 million deficit of the San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit District.

Gov. Ronald Reagan had insisted legislators enact property tax relief this year, but the Senate in July killed his own plan to allocate $155 million to county governments to finance the local tax reductions.

Proponents of the new, last-ditch Assembly-written plan, which included $155 million for potential property tax cuts, said yesterday that Reagan's legislative aides opposed the measure —partly because of the other tax relief provisions lumped in with it, and the size of new education funds in it.

The post-midnight vote actually was on the urgency clause which would put the bill into effect immediately. The massive measure, which originated as a simple one-page motel room tax bill and became 55 pages, still remained before the Senate but a near miracle would be needed to force it through the upper house.

Senators were holding in reserve a $94.2 million school aid bill. But the author of the $289 million package, Republican Assemblyman John G. Veneman of Modesto, gave it no chance in

Congressmen Adjourn; Top Issues Unsolved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, with its disputes still unsettled on foreign aid, firearms and Abe Fortas, has taken a month-long pause to prepare for the fight at the polls this fall.

Lawmakers failed yesterday in an all-out push to finish work on a foreign aid package before halting for the national political conventions. The Senate and the House recessed until Sept. 4, two days after Labor Day.

In a final flurry of action, Congress sent the White House a broader poultry inspection program and a flock of lesser measure. But the foreign aid bill, already fixed roughly at $1 billion below what President Johnson wants, became bogged down in a minor argument over log exports.

Lawmakers are divided over how long Congress will stay in session when it comes back in September to face a threatened filibuster over Johnson's choice of Fortas as chief justice at a time when politicians feel the tug to return to the campaign trail.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said it might be impossible to wind up before Christmas. But many members, particularly those facing tough re-election fights, say they are determined to get home by the first of October.

The Senate also faces a potentially fierce battle over efforts to strengthen a bill to ban mail sales of rifles and shotguns.

Other leftover problems include the $72-billion Pentagon appropriations bill which pays for the war in Vietnam, ratification of the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, and a $14-billion omnibus education measure.

In its first seven months, Congress exceeded widespread predictions of a go-slow year and rang up a record which included passage of the 10 per cent surtax, a landmark open housing law, a $5.4-billion program for better housing for the poor, and a catch-all crime-control package.

It repealed the gold standard to meet an international threat to the dollar but left Johnson's proposal for a travel tax on the shelf where it is likely to stay when Congress returns.

Congo Army Overthrows President

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo (UPI) —President Alphonse Massemba-Debat, who came to power five years ago through a coup, was overthrown today by the army. His fate was not disclosed.

The army high command said it ousted Massemba-Debat for "betraying the ideals of the 1963 revolution" which deposed his predecessor Fulbert Youlou.

Massemba-Debat, 47, had been president of the Congo Republic since a coup in 1963. His ouster came when he was trying to mediate a conflict between leftist and rightist factions in the left-leaning National Revolutionary Movement (MNR), the only political party in the country.

(Travelers arriving in Kinshasa from Brazzaville said shots were fired Thursday afternoon in the administrative quarters, near the presidential office and the ministries.)

The coup was disclosed in a Brazzaville radio broadcast of an Army communique which said former Defense Minister Augustin Poignet had been asked to replace Massemba-Debat "because of the absence of the chief of state."

It was not clear whether this meant Massemba-Debat had been killed in the army takeover or had fled into exile.

The broadcast also announced that paratrooper Capt. Marien Ngouabi, regarded as an extreme leftist, had been asked to take command of the national army.

Freed Flier Thinks More Due Release

Three American Air Force pilots, two from Marin County, released Friday by the North Vietnamese after months in prisoner of war camps, were to fly today to the United States.

Maj. James F. Low, 43, of Sausalito; Capt. Joe V. Carpenter, 37, of Ignacio, and Maj. Fred N. Thompson, 32, of Taylors, S. C., arrived today in Bangkok, Thailand, from Vientiane, Laos. They had flown to Vientiane yesterday aboard the weekly flight of the International Control Commission from Hanoi.

They were to leave for New York via Europe aboard a Trans World Airlines jet after a seven-hour stopover in Bangkok, during which they met briefly with reporters.

MORE RELEASES?

Low acted as spokesman and speculated that more American prisoners may be released by the North Vietnamese, according to Associated Press and United Press International reports.

"We are hoping there will be a lot more releases," he said. "We hope we are only the second of many groups that will be coming out."

The first trio of Americans released by the North Vietnamese, also pilots, was freed in January.

The flight home aboard a commercial plane, rather than a military craft, was seen as an effort to encourage further prisoner releases. When the first trio flew home in a military plane, antiwar groups in the United States protested that this imperiled such future actions.

Low would say only that he and the others chose to return on a commercial flight "because it is in the best interest of the United States and other pilots still in Vietnam."

GOOD HEALTH

All three appeared to be in good health and said they were well treated by their captors. Low called his own release after nearly eight months in prison "a humane gesture by the North Vietnamese government.

"They just got me one afternoon and asked if I would ac-

SNIPER HITS MARIN CITY PATROL CAR

A Marin sheriff's patrol car was peppered with small caliber shots about 11:40 p.m. yesterday as it drove along Drake Avenue in Marin City to a fire in a trash barrel at 287 Drake.

Sgt. Wade Powell, alone in the car, was not hit, officers reported.

Two shots hit the rear window and bounced off without breaking it. Two others hit the left front fender and dome light. There may have been a fifth shot which didn't hit the car, officers said.

No one has been arrested Officers aid the shots appeared to come from outdoors, but could not pin down a definite spot.

Antimissile Plans Draw No Decision

By ANNE BARDWELL

Marin County officials questioned but did not strongly oppose the army's plans to locate a Sentinel antiballistic missile base possibly on Angel Island or Wolfback Ridge at a briefing yesterday at the Civic Center.

Only Phillip Drath of San Rafael, Democratic candidate for congress from the Sixth District, attacked the plans. He told the assembled Army officials: "There is a great deal of opposition to the location of the missile base here. Angel Island is a prime recreational area; people are angry and upset over this."

Supervisor Chairman Ernest N. Kettenhofen also touched on public opposition as he repeatedly tried to learn what flexibility there was in the location of the Sentinel base.

Kettenhofen asked whether it would make any difference if the base were moved "one foot, one mile or 100 miles." Some latitude in location, he said, would "make a lot of difference in the feelings of a lot of people."

Most of the public officials and others in the audience of 35 spent an hour after the Army briefing asking questions about the base's location, its flexibility, and its affect on surrounding areas.

Maj. Gen. James R. Winn, commanding general of the Sixth Region Army Air Defense Command at Fort Baker, repeatedly said information on flexibility and range of missiles was classified.

He noted that the base would be part of a system designed to overlap in protecting the population of the United States. "If we move one base, even slightly, we would probably have to move them all or risk not protecting a segment of the population," Winn said. "However, our flex-

Italian Jet Was 'Sucked' To Ground

MILAN, Italy (UPI)—The pilot of an Alitalia DC8 jetliner which crashed yesterday today said the plane was "sucked" to earth by a violent downdraft as he was coming in for a landing in a thunderstorm. Twelve of the 95 persons aboard were killed.

Pilot Capt. Fabio Staffieri made the statement to official investigators from a hospital bed where he is being treated for shock.

Staffieri said he was flying at an altitude of 1,600 feet when a violent air current "sucked" the plane and he suddenly felt it dropping. He said he tried to pull up but it was too late.

The DC8 jet from Rome pancaked into a hill while approaching Milan's Malpensa

Auto Plant Dope Rings Smashed

FREMONT (AP) — A dope ring operating within the General Motors assembly plant here has been uncovered in a four-month investigation.

As many as 1,000 workers may have been involved in drug usage, some while sitting inside autos on the assembly line, police said today.

Thirteen employees have been arrested on drug-sale charges, and other arrests are imminent, police said.

Detective Sgt. Bert Jensen said the investigation also revealed widespread drug abuse at the Ford plant in Milpitas, 10 miles south, and at two Milpitas truck factories, Peterbilt and Trailmobile.

Harris Poll Reports Rockefeller Rates Best Against Humphrey

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Harris Survey reported today that Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's main strength in his bid for the Republican presidential nomination is his potential for drawing votes away from Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey.

The poll said that one in four voters who would back Humphrey against Richard M. Nixon would shift to Rockefeller if he were the GOP nominee instead of Nixon. (See other political stories, page 2.)

It added that the bulk of these swing votes are in the large industrial states which generally are regarded as the key to any presidential election.

The poll said Nixon would run much better than Rockefeller in the South in a three-cornered race involving Humphrey and George C. Wallace, the third-party candidate from Alabama.

The survey reported that on a national basis Rockefeller would get 40 per cent of the vote, Humphrey 34 and Wallace 20, while Nixon would get 36 per cent, Humphrey 41 and Wallace 16.

It said that in the South alone such three-way lineups would give Rockefeller 21, Humphrey 29 and Wallace 45; Nixon 24, Humphrey 33 and Wallace 37.

Excluding the South, the poll gave Rockefeller a 45-36 percentage edge over Humphrey while Humphrey had a 43-39 margin over Nixon.

Lawmakers Ease Marijuana Penalty

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Legislation giving courts a freer hand in dealing with the increasing number of youthful marijuana law offenders was sent to Gov. Ronald Reagan early today after an hours-long Senate struggle which saw the bill barely squeak by with the necessary 21-17 vote minimum.

The outcome was a defeat for lawmakers who complained that the bill would encourage more illegal use of marijuana, but a victory for those who argued a change must be made in current law to deal effectively with a burgeoning social problem.

The legislation would allow a judge discretion in sentencing those convicted for the first time of violating marijuana possession laws. He could impose a felony, which means a state prison term of up to 10 years, or a misdemeanor, with a maximum of one year in county jail.

At present, such possession is a mandatory felony, not leaving the judge a choice.

Assemblymen approved the measure back in April, but it was in the waning hours of the legislative session that supporters finally took it to a climactic Senate test.

The first roll call yesterday afternoon was 17-17, four shy of the majority needed for passage in the 40-seat upper house. In the evening, the measure finally hit the 21-vote mark, but opponents refused to let the vote be announced.

They held off a final announcement until almost 1 a.m. as the Senate went about other business. But then they gave up, and it was passed 21-17.

Sen. Jack McCarthy, R-San Rafael, was among those who voted for the bill.

Reagan has not said what he would do with the measure, but earlier this year cautiously indicated sympathy with the idea of making the law more effective than it now is, which backers say is the whole aim of the bill by Assemblyman W. Craig Biddle, R-Riverside.

The bill also gives judges the same discretion for first-time convictions on possessing dangerous drugs such as LSD and makes possible stiffer penalties. At present, violation of this law is punishable only by a misdemeanor, even though such drugs are considered by experts as much more potentially dangerous than marijuana.

A felony or a misdemeanor sentence could be handed down for drug offenses at the court's discretion, under this provision of the bill.

Senate Nods To Summer Job Program

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate early today approved Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh's $1.5 million program to provide summer jobs for unemployed youth in city slums.

The Senate passed the measure 27-8 and returned it to the Assembly for consideration of amendments.

Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, said the bill was intended to "solve the dual problems of idleness in our cities and a lack of summer jobs."

The program would expire Sept. 15.

Meanwhile, a bipartisan legislative package aimed at putting to work the hardcore unemployed was sent to Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The Assembly yesterday approved Senate amendments to the six-bill package supported by Unruh and Republican Lt. Gov. Robert H. Finch.

A key measure in the package would create a Human Resources Development Department geared to providing training, education, transportation, advice on job applications and other services to aid a man in finding work.

The legislation also would set up a non-profit California Job Development Corp. to mobilize government and private industry in helping small businesses get started in slums.

Leftist Teacher Firing Demanded By Assemblyman

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Assemblyman John Stull, R-Leucadia, has demanded that Marxist philospher Herbert Marcuse be dismissed from the University of California at San Diego faculty.

Stull called Marcuse an "ideological Judas-goat" in a letter sent yesterday to Dr. Charles Hitch, university president, and the state regents.

The legislator said the professor was trying to "lead the students to participation in the destruction of our system."

The university has had similar requests to fire Marcuse but has said his one-year contract would stand.

Marcuse, traveling in Europe, fled his La Jolla home three weeks ago after receiving a death threat. He returned briefly, then left on a previously planned trip abroad.

Unruh Wants Polls Studied

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh has submitted legislation asking for a study of California political pollsters.

Unruh said yesterday his study was prompted by recent polls by George Gallup Jr. and Louis Harris, each showing different strengths for Richard Nixon and Nelson Rockefeller as Republican presidential candidates.

Both pollsters later explained their polls agreed, if variable factors were taken into consideration.

"When two prestigious polling organizations reach opposite conclusions and then join together in trying to explain their differences away, then we have ample concern," Unruh said.

"If these polls are inaccurate or the polling methods questionable, then we should know about it," he added.

Drunken Drivers May Get Option To Keep License

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Convicted drunken drivers could choose between a license suspension or a jail term under legislation sent to Gov. Ronald Reagan yesterday by the Senate.

The upper house approved amendments tacked on by the Assembly to the bill by Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka.

The measure provides the alternative of a six-month suspension or 10 days in jail for a first conviction and 20 days in jail for the second conviction.

The jail term or suspension would be in addition to a fine or any other penalty imposed by a court. The present law requires a suspension, but offers no alternative. However, a judge may still waive a license suspension.

Anti-Pollution Council Approved

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate last night passed 28-7 a bill by Assemblyman Don Mulford, R-Piedmont, creating a state environmental quality study council to search for ways to combat air and water pollution and solve garbage disposal problems.

The bill was returned to the Assembly for consideration of Senate amendments.

The Senate rejected the measure last week but it was revived and passed on a second try.

CAMPAIGN 1968

Reagan Heading East As Underdog

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan took the role of a political underdog today as he headed for the Republican National Convention saying no one could refuse the presidency.

The California Republican's aides at home and in Miami Beach, where the convention begins Monday, were pressing him as a serious contender for his party's presidential nomination.

Reagan and other members of the 86-member California delegation were flying to the convention in four chartered jet airplanes.

The delegation, second largest at the convention, is pledged to Reagan as a favorite son. The governor says after his name is placed in nomination he can be considered a serious presidential candidate.

Reagan was asked at a news conference as he left Sacramento yesterday afternoon for the first leg of his trip if he expected to win a spot on the GOP ballot.

"I would say the odds are against it," he replied. "But there is a possibility, not only for me but for others, if a deadlock exists."

A newsman asked Reagan if he would like to be the GOP presidential nominee.

"It isn't very important whether one would like to be," Reagan answered. "It's whether the people want you to be. I don't think anyone has the right to say no."

Reagan confirmed that he planned to meet with other state delegations to the convention starting tomorrow afternoon. He declined to characterize the sessions as attempts to influence the delegates and said they were "a kind of exchange."

But he insisted, as he has for more than a year, that the convention still was not locked up for Richard M. Nixon. He noted in reply to a newsman's question that "according to most of the pros, it's still going to go beyond one or two ballots."

F. Clifton White, a Reagan strategist, announced Thursday that the California governor would meet with about a dozen delegations, starting tomorrow with New Jersey, Mississippi, Alabama, Montana, Oklahoma and South Carolina.

Reagan strategists believe Nixon will fall short of victory on the first ballot and that his delegate strength will begin to soften. The delegates, particularly those who followed Goldwater in 1964, may then turn to the California governor, who worked hard in that losing cause.

The strong California delegation plans to stay solidly with Reagan although they will hold daily meetings to review the latest delegate standings.

Reagan said any decision to release the delegates from the favorite son pledge he won unopposed in the June primary election will be made with all members of the delegation present.

"I'm no political boss," he said. "I know that if I release the delegation now, it would split down the middle with half going in each direction."

WALLACE

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Not one but two state conventions of the American Independent party convene today to nominate George C. Wallace for president.

The two conventions grew out of a dispute among Wallace supporters in California. "That's a sign of a healthy party, to have a little dissension," Wallace said when he arrived last night.

A result of the dispute could be selection of competing 40-member slates of presidential electors, with a court decision needed to choose the legal one.

Wallace addresses the convention his aides consider to be the "real one," the one attended by a number of the 60 American Independent party nominees for Congress and the Legislature chosen in the June 4 primary.

The other convention was organized by William K. Shearer, who claims to be the state party chairman. He said there are 194 eligible delegates and all are invited to his convention. Shearer said these potential delegates include those chosen by county and state party committees.

Stan Sikes, a Wallace aide, said Shearer is not the state chairman and the party committee won't go into legal operation until January under state law and can't name convention delegates.

HUMPHREY

DETROIT (UPI)—Vice President Hubert Humphrey takes a campaign break at his Waverly, Minn., home today after stumping "the heart of Soulville" and again announcing he would fire Selective Service Director Gen. Lewis B. Hershey if elected president.

Humphrey, dogged by antiwar pickets at one speech stop yesterday and by law-and-order hecklers at another, went one up on the hecklers that have harassed him at campaign stops across the country by telling cameramen at one site not to focus on them. The audience of 2,000 in suburban St. Leclaire Shores cheered as Humphrey said, "When the media of this country quit playing up these loudmouths and start listening to what's going on . . ."

Humphrey got a warm reception from a crowd of about 1,000 Negroes at a housing project near the site of last year's Detroit riots.

"I'm told this is the heart of Soulville. If you don't come here you don't have any soul," said Humphrey.

"I want you to help us register and vote. I hope you will vote for me as the next president," he said.

Humphrey then joined in clapping and singing with a Negro pop music band on the speaker's platform before walking through the crowd to shake hands and sign autographs for youngsters.

CONVENTION

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—Richard M. Nixon's political agents today applied maximum pressure to wavering delegates in an attempt to sew up the Republican presidential nomination on the first ballot.

The Nixon organization adopted this tactic at the end of a hectic week of preconvention activity in which campaigners for Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and Gov. Ronald Reagan of California did everything possible to shake loose some of Nixon's soft support.

The Republican National Convention opens Monday and the balloting to choose a presidential candidate comes Wednesday night. The winner needs 667 votes.

In an alliance of political opposites, Rockefeller and Reagan managers have based their strategy on stopping Nixon for two ballots. They assume he would slip badly after those votes.

The latest UPI tabulation showed Nixon had lost 17 votes during the past week. It gave him 674 delegates, including 203 committed and 471 leaning to him. Rockefeller's total was 269 and Reagan's was 167. The balance were uncommitted or pledged to favorite sons. Leaning delegates, of course, may change their minds before the balloting.

Rockefeller arrives in this convention city in midafternoon to stay for the duration. Reagan, who spent 18 hours here earlier this week, primarily to testify before the platform committee, arrives tonight with the California delegation. Nixon won't get there till Monday night, after the convention opens.

Three governors, who are favorite son candidates of key delegations, are already in residence. They are James A. Rhodes of Ohio, George Romney of Michigan and Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland.

Their states have a combined total of 132 delegates. None could deliver his entire delegation to the candidate of his choice.

PLATFORM

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Battles over Vietnam and foreign trade policies today threatened to keep weary Republican platform writers from meeting a self-imposed deadline for completion of the 1968 GOP campaign document.

As the 102-man Republican National Convention's Temporary Resolutions Committee held a third day of closed sessions, one member, Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., raised the possibility of setting time limits on dealing with individual issues.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, Ill., chairman of the committee, had set a deadline of tonight for finishing work on the platform but slippage could occur unless the Vietnam and trade conflicts were settled.

Supporters of a liberal trade policy were insisting on changing a proposed plank that would urge protection of American industry from low-priced foreign imports.

But one source said the "real row" was over the foreign policy plank keyed to war and peace in Southeast Asia.

CRANSTON

SANTA ANA (AP) — Alan Cranston, Democratic candidate for U. S. Senate, has resigned his spot on the California delegation to the National Democratic Convention.

Cranston told a news conference yesterday he wanted to devote "every bit of my time and energy" to his campaign against Republican Max Rafferty.

He said he did not plan to endorse any candidate for president because it would endanger party unity.

State polls indicate Cranston has a lead over Rafferty in the Senate race, but they also show Rafferty has strong backing. Rafferty, the state superintendent of public instruction, won the GOP nomination over liberal incumbent Sen. Thomas Kuchel in the June 4 primary.

RICHMOND FLOWERS

Ex-Wallace Foe Indicted

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) —Former Alabama Atty. Gen. Richmond Flowers vowed today to prove his innocence of federal charges that he used his office in a conspiracy to extort money in stock transactions.

Flowers, who gained nationwide attention in 1966 when he openly courted the Negro vote in running for governor against the late Gov. Lurleen B. Wallace, was indicted on four counts of conspiracy by a federal grand jury in Birmingham yesterday.

"I appeared before the grand jury voluntarily, hoping to convince them of my innocence by telling the truth," he said in a brief statement today. "Evidently they did not believe me.

"It now behooves me to prove my innocence in trial court, which I can certainly do."

Flowers appeared before the grand jury for more than an hour yesterday, about six hours before the indictments were handed down.

Arraignment before a U. S. commissioner was tentatively set for next Friday.

Court Upsets Suspension On Abortion

A San Francisco obstetrician, whose license was suspended for performing an illegal therapeutic abortion, won court reversal of that action yesterday.

Dr. John Paul Shively was among nine physicians, including two from Marin, charged with illegally performing the surgery two years ago.

Judge Mathew F. Eyman of San Francisco Superior Court reversed a 90-day license suspension against Shively by the state Board of Medical Examiners. He also overturned a public reprimand of the San Francisco doctor.

Shively, along with Dr. Allan T. Moss of Mill Valley, Dr. Gregory Smith of Kentfield and five others, offered themselves as test cases in a fight for liberalization of the state abortion laws.

They were charged with performing abortions on women with German measles. The doctors insist the operations were ethical, though not condoned by law. In each case, the surgery was approved by the therapeutic committees at their hospitals.

Their actions provided fresh support for the 1966 campaign to change the abortion laws. Until last year, no abortion was legal in California unless performed to save a woman's life.

Moss' case comes up with the examiners in San Francisco Friday, with Smith scheduled to appear Sept. 16. Both doctors expressed delight yesterday at Eyman's ruling but declined comment on how it will effect them, pending discussion with their attorneys.

Moss did say, however, he doesn't believe the decision will have any effect on the present abortion laws.

Expectant mothers who contract measles in early months of pregnancy could give birth to deformed children. Some mothers would rather undergo an abortion than take that chance.

When Eyman heard the arguments July 16, he showed deep concern for the mother in such a situation, pointing to the "heartbreak and disruption" in the family.

Biting Cat Raises Fear For Children

A stray house cat that bit and scratched several San Rafael children was under observation for rabies today after eluding residents and police for nearly 24 hours.

It took a score of Bayo Vista Way residents, four Marin County Humane Society deputies, two police officers, two firemen and some 500 gallons of water to catch the animal. But the efforts probably saved 13-year-old Charlene Ann Proctor and four other children from the painful Pasteur treatment.
four other children from the painful Pasteur treatment.

The girl's father, Kenneth M. Proctor, said the cat had been around the neighborhood for about a week. He said in that time it reportedly scratched four children and last Monday, bit his daughter while she was playing with it near the family's home.

Efforts by neighbors and Patrolman Scott E. Nelson to retrieve the animal failed. Nelson spent his off duty hours Monday night in a continuing search, with no success.

The cat finally was cornered in a sewer drain Tuesday and flushed out with a fire hose. The fire department reported using 500 gallons in the attempt because the animal took refuge on a ledge and was able to avoid the water for some 30 minutes.

Had the cat not been retrieved, all scratch victims as well as the Proctor girl would have faced the Pasteur treatment. If a rabid animal licks its paws, a scratch can be as dangerous as a bite, according to Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer.

The cat, now at Humane Society headquarters, shows no sign of disease, the society reported yesterday. But the animal will remain caged until Thursday.

Cooky Jar Raided

Jeanette M. Scatena of 16 Locksly Lane, San Rafael, reported the theft of $50 in cash from a cookie jar in her home Thursday night, police said today. Several windows had been left open, police reported.

Bombers Batter Buildup; Reds Tear-Gas Marines

SAIGON (AP) — American B52 Stratofortresses laid their carpet of rolling thunder on the A Shau Valley again today, trying to disrupt an enemy buildup that threatens Da Nang and the old imperial capital of Hue.

A Shau, which snakes 25 miles along the Laotian border, has been the main enemy supply zone since U.S. troops withdrew from the valley last March. Military spokesmen said the eight-jet bombers have dropped 900 tons of explosives on targets in the valley in the past two days.

Two U.S. helicopters were downed by groundfire in the A Shau Valley yesterday. One chopper exploded, killing two crewmen and wounding two others. The two-man crew from the other aircraft was rescued.

The northern provinces around Da Nang, the Marine headquarters in Vietnam, have seen increased ground fighting in recent weeks. The latest engagement occurred yesterday, but was not reported until today.

Military spokesmen said North Vietnamese troops, spraying tear gas, invaded a small Marine radio relay station overlooking the abandoned Khe Sanh combat base and killed six Americans. The enemy seized a landing zone for helicopters supplying the isolated outpost, but were beaten back by the Leathernecks.

The Marines reported killing five North Vietnamese and capturing four rifles and four satchel charges.

Little significant ground action was reported elsewhere in the country.

The U.S. Command announced today that the 5,000-man Marine Regimental Landing Team will return to the United States shortly. It will be the largest single American unit to leave the Vietnam war, but a U.S. spokesman said it did not mean de-escalation.

The 27th Regimental Team was sent to Vietnam last February during the critical enemy Tet offensive. It will be replaced by the 1st Brigade of the 5th Mechanized Infantry Division from Fort Carson, Colo.

New Jolts Frighten Filipinos

MANILA (UPI)—A strong new tremor shook Manila today, sending thousands of persons fleeing into the streets. It was the 18th aftershock of the Philippines' deadly "Black Friday" earthquake.

The death toll throughout the Philippines from the quake stood at 145, with most of the victims killed in the collapse of an apartment house in Manila's old Santa Cruz section.

By 9 p.m. (6 a.m. PDT), rescuers had recovered the bodies of 109 persons from the rubble. Another 254 were living when pulled out from the debris but 26 died later in hospitals.

Police Chief Enrique Morales said "close to 300 persons" were still trapped beneath tons of rubble of the five-story apartment house.

"Time is of the essence" in getting those trapped out, Morales said.

Most of the dead were in the Manila apartment house but the toll included six others in the Manila area and four in the provinces. All were Filipinos or Chinese.

The Manila Weather Bureau's geophysical laboratory said the latest shock lasted five seconds and registered five on the Rossi-Forel scale of 10.

Nearly 3,000 rescue workers used jackhammers, torches, cranes and bare hands to try to reach victims still trapped under the twisted steel and splintered wood.

Several times, cries of help were heard above the din of the jackhammers.

Morales said interviews with survivors indicated about 650 persons were in the apartment building when it pitched forward and collapsed in the first of the series of quakes. He said perhaps 20 or 30 persons scrambled to safety immediately.

He said another 334 were accounted for "leaving close to 300 still trapped."

Toll Is Seven For Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Siesmologists predicted more "settling" earthquakes today in the wake of a severe tremor yesterday that left seven dead and more than 100 hurt, mostly in Southern Mexico.

President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz ordered military rescue brigades and 60 tons of food and medicine into isolated jungle towns on the southern Pacific coast, reportedly 80 per cent destroyed.

The long, rumbling quake, centered 350 miles south of Mexico City, shook buildings in the capital, shattered windows and knocked chunks of plaster from walls and ceilings.

The state sales tax, under terms of the $1 billion tax increase bill last year, drops from 5 cent to 4½ cents on the dollar Oct. 1 unless the Legislature enacts some form of property tax relief.

The 1967 Legislature set aside half a cent of the one-cent boost in the sales tax for use in cutting property tax rates in 1968.

Locked Car Stolen

A maroon 1966 Ford Mustang was reported stolen from Anchor Street in Sausalito at 11 p.m. yesterday. The car is owned by Joseph Gillon of 440 Geary Street, San Francisco, who told police it has been locked.

ibility is greater than one foot," he told Kettenhofen.

He said the Army was having difficulty finding a suitable site in Boston. Public opposition is quite strong there, he said. Announced Sentinel sites on the West Coast are Seattle, Los Angeles and the San Francisco Bay Area. Others are to be located in Hawaii, Alaska and Salt Lake City. The locations of other sites have not been announced.

County Planning Director Paul C. Zucker asked what environmental criteria had been considered in selecting the two Marin sites.

"We are here to perform a tactical job but we are also concerned with the environment surrounding a base," said Lt. Col. Robert McLaughlin of Ent Air Force Base, Colo. "We wouldn't locate the base in a growing urban area for fear the encroaching city areas would inhibit our functioning."

"You seem to have it a little backwards," Zucker replied. "We are concerned about the impact of the base on the surrounding environment, not the impact of the environment on the base."

Maj. Freeman G. Cross of the Sentinel system command in Huntsville, Ala., said the next step will be to test the Marin sites and one in Contra Costa County for geological suitability. He refused to indicate which site was preferred.

In answer to a question from Supervisor Peter Behr, Winn said if all three sites were exactly equal in their suitability, public opinion against one particular site might be a factor in the final selection.

Cross added that Sentinel system missiles would be designed to knock out a Communist Chinese missile without detonating the enemy nuclear warhead.

Publicist Faces Charge On Blow

Peter L. Goldstein, 34, awarded $362,000 Wednesday in a court settlement of a 1965 traffic accident, was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday for allegedly striking a woman acquaintance and her daughter in San Francisco.

Goldstein, brother of Marin Municipal Court Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr., posted $125 bail and was scheduled for appearance in San Francisco Municipal Court at 10 a.m. Aug. 15.

His attorney, William O. Weissich, said yesterday Goldstein allegedly struck a friend, Mrs. Patricia Rogers, and her daughter, Jillian, 19, at Mrs. Rogers' home in San Francisco last Sunday evening.

Mrs. Rogers reportedly suffered nose and jaw injuries. Cause of the fracas was unknown. Goldstein was booked on a warrant issued in San Francisco.

Goldstein, a former San Anselmo publicist now living in San Francisco, received the $362,000 settlement for injuries suffered in a two-car accident on Highway 101 on Oct. 19, 1965.

the crowd of 30 to 40 took up protest posters prepared by the Peace and Freedom Movement and shuffled in a circle around the speakers being interviewed.

The inmate protest today, which was to be entirely within prison rules, is against policies of the California Adult Authority which runs the parole and probation system, particularly what inmates call abuse of the indeterminate sentence law.

PAROLE RULES

Adult authority practice is to set a definite sentence when an inmate is paroled. A man serving five to 15 years might be paroled at four years and given a six-year sentence, the last two to be served on parole.

But if he violates parole for any reason, he is returned to prison and his sentence is raised to the maximum 15 years. Convicts call it "life on the installment plan."

No newsmen were admitted to the prison today. Associate Warden James W. L. Park said, "We don't want to give them an audience. We've never let reporters in when there's any heat on — I'd hate for my action to be the one that triggered something."

Ted Davidson, Berkeley graduate student and chairman of the new rights committee, said yesterday the protest was aimed at winning "constitutional and human rights for prisoners," and cited the adult authority practices.

Kathleen Cleaver, Black Panther official and the Peace and Freedom Party candidate for the 18th Assembly district, said her groups "want all the black, brown and white prisoners free." Prison is only a concentrated form of society's racism, she said.

Nearest thing to violence yesterday came when a newspaper man, apparently incensed at the repeated use of "pigs" in reference to lawmen, got into a name-calling contest with a mustached youth from Oakland who snapped several pictures at the scene.

San Quentin officers snapped dozens of photos of the speakers and demonstrators yesterday, first with a telephoto lens from inside the gates, then close-up during the prsss conference.

The California Highway Patrol barricaded the entry road to the prison gate, and most of the demonstrators had to walk several hundred yards from the Highway 17 turnoff to the gates.

Many arrived late after a Berkeley rally in support of the inmates.

A 24-hour vigil at the Los Angeles offices of the Adult Authority was to begin at nooon today.

Shooting Mishap In Marin City

A 47-year-old Marin City man suffered a slight gunshot wound of the arm last night when a high caliber weapon apparently discharged, sheriff's deputies said.

The injured man, Leonard Smith of 171 Drake Avenue, told officers he and a friend had the gun because they were planning to go hunting today. He identified the other man as Walter Anor of 79 Cole Street, Marin City.

Sheriff's officers said the gun, a .44-caliber Magnum, apparently discharged accidentally shortly after 8 p.m. and the bullet grazed Smith's right arm. He was treated at Marin General.

The two men gave conflicting reports of where the incident occurred, officers said. One said it happened at Smith's apartment and the other claimed it happened by a Marin City store.

Wallet Looted

When Mario L. Cortess of 1 Laurel Place, San Rafael, went to bed Thursday night, he left his front door unlocked. When he awoke, $160 was gone from his wallet and the door was locked, police reported today.

Antiwar GI's Trial Delay Is Granted

CAMP PENDLETON (AP) — The court martial of one of nine servicemen involved in a San Francisco anti - war protest, charged with being AWOL 54 days, has been continued at the request of his attorney.

Marine Pvt. Jon Robinson Jr. was granted the continuance yesterday. Court attaches said the hearing probably will be resumed in a week.

Robinson was among nine servicemen accused of being absent without leave when they chained themselves to nine sympathetic clergymen for a two-day sit-in protest in San Francisco and Marin City churches last month.

The nine asserted they had resigned from the military saying they oppose the Vietnam war, authorities said.

Thursday the Rev. Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, Presbyterian theologian at Stanford University, asked Clark Clifford, secretary of defense, to discharge Robinson as a conscientious objector.

Meanwhile, the Episcopal Diocese of New York says in a new report that the notion of sanctuary, or the "vague" right of a fugitive to take refuge in a church, has never existed in American law and was long ago repudiated in Europe.

The report was drawn up by the Guild of St. Ives, an informal group of 22 Episcopal lawyers and clergymen, at the request of the Rt. Rev. J. Stewart Wetmore, Suffragan Bishop of the diocese.

According to the report, those who seek and those who give sanctuary to fugitives "must find their justification in morals, not in the law."

The nine servicemen were removed from St. Andrew Presbyterian Church in Marin City by armed forces police and sheriff's deputies last month.

Airport during a thunderstorm. Most of the 83 survivors were not seriously hurt. Many said trees cushioned the impact.

Among them were Fred Gottheil, 37, of Urbana, Ill., who suffered a fractured vertebrae; his wife, Diana, 29, not seriously injured, and their daughter, Luisa, 2, who was hospitalized in shock.

Airline officials speculated that a downdraft pushed the airliner into the hill. The fuel tanks burned slowly, not exploding and allowed the survivors to escape.

"It was not a violent crash, and the plane didn't even disintegrate," said Milan industrialist Franco Colombo, a passenger. The flight recorder was recovered from the burned wreckage.

It was Italy's first air crash since 47 persons died when a jet went down after takeoff from Rome four years ago. The Alitalia flight had been scheduled to go on to Montreal.

Driver Injured In Sausalito

A Mill Valley man was knocked unconscious and his auto wrecked early today when it crashed into a parked semi-trailer truck on Bridgeway in Sausalito.

Elie A. Olson, 22, of 341 Jean Street, was reported conscious and in good condition today at Marin General Hospital, where he was taken after the accident at 1:30 a.m.

California Highway Patrol officers reported that Olson was apparently driving north on Bridgeway and for some reason veered into the southbound lane and struck the semitrailer parked at the roadside. The trailer sustained minor damage to its rear left tire.

Driver Injured

Phoebe McConnell of 271 Corte Madera Avenue, Corte Madera, was treated at Marin General Hospital yesterday for bruises and scrapes after her car collided with one driven by Frank John Hansal, 206 Morning Sun Avenue, Mill Valley. The accident occurred about 1:30 p.m. at Tamalpais and Casa Buena drives in Corte Madera, police reported.

LINGERIE

Lingerie picks up the many moods of fashion and finds its own way of expression. The mini shirt-for-sleeping is as contemporary as it is classic, with the crisp ruffles forming an Edwardian jabot effect on the very modern tricot nylon. The satin-banded side vents add a pretty touch to the classic shirt.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Experiment In Marijuana Could Be More Than 'Just A Test'

DEAR HELEN:

I've often heard that marijuana does for you what you expect it to do. So I tried an experiment.

I told three guys I could get them some pot. They had never tried it but had heard all about the effects, like climbing shadows, walking on air, being supersensitive to music, etc.

Well, I got some oregano, mixed it with Bull Durham, rolled it into reefers and told them it was pure Acapulco Gold. They had never seen grass, so they didn't know the difference.

Then another guy and I smoked along with them, and went through the "trip" bit. You never saw anything funnier in your life. Those fellas went on a high like you've never seen — because they expected it, and followed our lead. No matter what we said, they experienced it too—and they really thought they did. When we told them afterward it was a put-on, they wouldn't believe us.

This probably wouldn't work with everyone, but I think it shows that at least part of the pot thing is psychological.—EXPERIMENTER

DEAR EX:

True. Especially in the U.S., land of the "burn artist." My spies tell me it takes a lively imagination to get high on the watered down "tea" sold to inexperienced teen-agers. But cut or not, if they're busted for marijuana, it can mean a felony charge on their record; and that means certain colleges, jobs, careers have gone up in smoke. A big price to pay for a nothing-much experience.—H.

DEAR HELEN:

Adults are strange. They're so obsessed with sex. My parents are scared to death every time I go on a date that I won't come back a virgin. They're absolutely sure that if I do make it through high school, I'll start living with a fellow the minute I get in college. I try to tell them this is a matter of personal preference and sex really isn't the biggest goal in most girls' lives, but they read all these statistics and reports and they think I'm just trying to make things easy for them. That's another way of saying they don't believe me when I tell them my date and I can enjoy a whole evening together without climbing into the back seat.

If I told them I know college kids who rent a cabin at the beach and the girls sleep upstairs, the boys downstairs — they'd say, "How naive can you get?" But it happens. Young people don't condemn other couples for what they do, if they sincerely care about each other, but we're a lot more selective than adults think we are, this in spite of the fact that parents almost push us into giving in by their cave-in attitude.

One of my friends told me the other day that her mother asked her if she wanted a prescription for The Pill when she left for college. Ye Gods, the girl didn't even have a special boy friend yet.

What's with some of these adults anyway?—DISGUSTED

DEAR DIS:

They're a crazy mixed-up group that reads too much. And what they read either scares them green, or turns them into plastic-moderns who read into the "new morality" nothing but sex, and figure The Pill will solve all problems.

Luckily all parents aren't like this, just as all teens aren't as your parents picture them. Stick with your ideals, Dis., and if your folks get too much, practice selective deafness.—H.

It Is A Very Simple Job To Shorten Your Own Leather Coat

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I have a beautiful suede coat that has needed shortening for several years, and I was always afraid to cut it off. Now with everything fashionable in leather, I must get it fixed for this fall. Is this a job that should be done professionally or can I do it myself?

FAYE

DEAR FAYE,

Fortunately, this is a very simple job and if you work well with your hands, you can certainly shorten your own leather coat. Carefully have someone mark it with a skirt marker so it will be even. Allow about 1½ to 2 inches for the hem. Use the milky household glue and simply glue the hem in place. If you have several inches of leather left over, use it for pocket flaps, collar, tie belt, or whatever to trim a tweed or knit dress, and you will have a beautifully coordinated ensemble.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Leon Grider, Russell Springs, Ky., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing tip.

"When, after a new baby, I found that last year's skirts were too small for this year's waistline even though the hips stayed the same, this idea came to me. Remove the waistband, and let out the darts slightly. Cut a contour or bias facing from material of the same color. Sew the facing to skirt, tacking loose edge to skirt at seams and darts and you have a smart new skirt in the latest style of the 'no waist-band look'."

DEAR EUNICE,

I am in the process of making three formal gowns for my daughters and after spending many frustrating hours on the first one, I am turning to you for help.

The pattern looked very simple, however, it was a designer pattern. When I got to the inside, there were two pages of instructions about making a very complicated undergarment which would later be used to build the gown on. I am beside myself with stiffening, hair braid and feather boning. Surely there must be an easier way. Is this foundation actually necessary?

MRS. J.D.

DEAR MRS. J.D.:

You are the first to write me about the new gowns which are very different in line from the straight A-line's to which we have become accustomed. I imagine the gown you are referring to is strapless with a fitted bodice, which would need a well-fitted foundation.

I have found in the past that one of the easiest ways to make ball gowns was to begin with a well-fitted long line strapless bra. This already comes with all the feather boning and support you need and eliminates the need of making a strapless bra as well. You can begin your instruction sheet with the construction of the gown itself. I'd like to hear from you readers who try this. It has worked beautifully for us.

MRS. M. E. SAYS: "I would like to share with your readers a little sewing tip that has worked beautifully for me.

"With the gathered skirts, and especially the shirt cuffs on long sleeves, it is very difficult to keep the gathers even while stitching either the waistband or the cuff to the gathered area Instead of the ordinary two rows of machine stitching for the gathers, which are placed at the seam line and ¼ inch closer to the cut edge, I stitch ¼ inch above and ¼ inch below the seam line. When the gathers are pulled in place, it is much easier to keep them even at the seamline. After the seam has been stitched, remove the gathering thread that shows."

DEAR EUNICE,

I have tried to make the very narrow spaghetti strap for a bathing suit, but every time I turn the cording right side out, the cord comes out, too. Can you tell me how to make the straps with the cording inside?

MRS. R. S.

DEAR MRS. R. R.:

When you wish the cording to remain inside the straps, you must begin with twice the length of cord in relation to the length of finished strap. Instead of sewing the end of the cord to the end of your bias strip of fabric, you sew the half way point of your cord to the end of the fabric. Next, fold the fabric over the cord and machine stitch fairly close to the cord. Begin by sewing at an angle away from the cord and gradually coming close to the cord; if you don't do this, it will be too difficult to turn.

Trim the raw edges of the fabric leaving the same amount extended on the cut edges as you have on the other side of the stitching line. Try not to twist the cord while turning it.

If you would like more detailed information with sketches, please send 10 cents, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal and request my leaflet called "Spaghetti Straps and Robe Belts."

Consumers Are Also Purchasers

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—Whether a nation is eight million or 200 million in population, these populations represent consumers. And consumers, being purchasers, provide the outlets for the fraudulent trade practices, for over-pricing of the products sold the poor, for misleading labeling and advertising.

Two women from that nation of eight million, Sweden, are in the United States to study what this country of 222 million is doing to protect the consumer in pricing and quality of merchandise.

"We have no ghettos, but we do have families with less than others," is the way Mrs. Birgitta Rembe puts it. "And we do want to see what we can learn from you in helping them . . . and all consumers."

"I'm impressed by the way the consumer really is getting to be known, to be heard, in the United States," said Mrs. Lillemor Erlander.

"We don't have legislation on truth in labeling like you have just had enacted," she continued. "But we have a government-aided information labeling institute that regulates labels on everything from canned pizza and stews to canoes and tents.

"And we have the strongest legislation I know of on performance and safety of anything electrical. Every electrical product goes through a thorough government testing . . . you hardly ever hear of an accident from an electrical appliance."

Mrs. Erlander, daughter-in-law of Tage Erlander, Sweden's prime minister, is an economist with the Swedish Confederation of Trade Unions.

Mrs. Rembe, an economist also and a former newspaperwoman, is in charge of consumer service programs for the radio sections of Swedish Broadcasting Corp. She and her staff study consumer problems from best buys in food to what to look for in a washing machine to exposes of such things as travel agencies' unrealistic pricing and promises on vacation tours.

Michael of San Francisco and Henry M. Glatt of San Francisco, and the grandsons of Mrs. Paula Fried of San Francisco.

Add to explosions: the bonding explosion. Of all the recent developments, bonded fabrics have the usefulness and end-use potential matched by few other fabrics with the exception of permanent press. Restaurants Rank First Among Retail Businesses

By WILEY MALONEY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Anyone can fry an egg. The trick is to sell it at a profit.

This is the crux of the food service industry, whose sales to those who "Eat Away From Home" is big business.

To find the income to be made from the food services, the Bank of America did a two-year research project which runs to 16,000 words and 34 pages including the charts and graphs.

The survey finds the food service industry totals $27 billion at retail annually. Separate eating and drinking places now rank as the No. 1 type of retail outlet in the nation.

"They outnumber grocery stores, they outnumber service stations," the survey said. "American families now spend $400 to $500 annually. In fact, we now spend more to 'eat out' than we do to buy new and used automobiles."

That means there is a "lemming-like" impulse for anyone who can fry an egg to put his hand under this golden flow. The industry remains mostly small businesses—independents operating a single outlet. Eating out means buying one of the few remaining custom produced commodities still available at mass produced prices. How do they do it?

"The harsh fact is that many don't," the survey said. "Recent figures compiled by Dun & Bradstreet show that over half of the restaurants in the United States show no taxable profit."

The illusion that anybody can fry an egg, coupled with knowing what raw food costs in the supermarket, makes food service seem like an easy, highly profitable business to the uninitiated.

That's the thumb in the soup bowl.

"Each year, eating and drinking places account for around 20 per cent of all retail failures," the survey said. "Most failures occur in the second year of business and incur an average of almost $50,000 liabilities."

To survive requires a dedication that relatively few men and women are able to sustain for the long pull. An indication of this is that only half of all food service operations maintain the same ownership for five years or more.

The trick of making a profit requires attention to detail—organizing a business that is actually a manufacturing plant; to people—managing a service business with due respect to the servers and the served, and, lastly, to profit—the most important of all.

Think school is a laugh? See how funny it is when you can't get a good-paying job.

A small education is something you can't laugh off. It's the biggest handicap you'll ever have . . . today, tomorrow, the day after tomorrow, and every day of your working life.

And it's a funny thing. People who really stay with it and get a good education are often seen laughing all the way to the bank.

It's no joke. To get a good job today, you need a good education. A good education is the number-one requirement for the better jobs with the better salaries . . . and the better futures, too.

So if you're in school now . . . stay there! Learn all you can for as long as you can. If you're out of school, you can still get lots of valuable training outside the classroom. Just call on the Youth Counselor at your State Employment Service. Or visit a Youth Opportunity Center, which has been set up in many cities to help you.

To get a good job, get a good education

SOME YOUTH DIFFERENT

College Show's Creators Bring Varied Personalities To Stage

By GARY TISCHLER

It's always easy to lump that pliable commodity called youth into two handy-dandy baskets.

Take one basket and fill it with sorority pins, football games, crewcuts and Dr. Spock baby books and fill the other with burned draft cards, some grass and sugarcubes, long hair and Dr. Spock Vietnam books.

Refreshingly, there are always some who won't make basket cases.

Some of them will be on display today at the College of Marin Fine Arts Building at 8:30 p.m. in a very aware and wry revue called "It Can't Happen Here . . . But It Is."

Four members of the cast were primarily responsible for writing most of the material — Bobby Sandler, 18, Mike Knight, 21; Kathy Quiren, 20, and Judy Navas, 20. They are not easy to straitjacket or dump into a basket.

Sandler ("I was conceived in New York") is the youngest member of the group. He and Knight, of Kentfield, are drama students at the University of Miami in Florida. He joined this year's revue during a visit to Knight.

He's a slightly shabby boy with a Bob Dylan hairdo, who throws away so many one-liners in conversation that you're apt to dismiss him as something of a precocious clown, which he isn't.

He comes through with wit bred on the New York streets. The skits on which he collaborated with Knight are full of that kind of humor, plus some moving put-downs on Vietnam, random violence and the draft.

There is a pantomime sketch of a graduation ceremony that pretty much covers his feeling about the war and draft.

"It's really sad," he said. "They're strangers and they don't know each other and they'll go into the Army and kill each other. That's really happening."

Mike and Bobby put together a series of street corner tapes in New York, which are used as filler and background material in the show. They're responses to things like "Say Hello to San Francisco" and "How do you feel about thes world?"

"It was weird," Sandler remembers. "People would sing, recite poetry, everything. Some wouldn't do it. There was one of the sweetest little old ladies you've ever seen, and she hit me in the face."

Knight, who seems always to be wearing a bemused expression, is very much wrapped up in drama. He and Sandler both have had extensive experience at Miami, Knight winning best actor award for the part of Joseph in Kafka's "The Trial," Sandler taking best supporting role honors in the same play.

Kathy seems something of a shy novice but her acting and her material don't show it. An Illinois transplant now living in San Francisco, she'll be going to New York to study drama in the fall.

She wrote "The Last Conversation", a darkened, chorus-echoed series of questions about today's society, for the show.

"I like grandiose, epic things," she said. "Almost anything by Brecht. I wrote "The Last Conversation" right after Kennedy's assassination."

A large girl, she has a marvelous talent for mimicry and pantomine. She is not a screamer, and probably does more with movement and gesture than anyone in the group.

Judy Navas describes herself as a "cultural bum."

A dark-haired girl with a kind of stern beauty, she lives in Terra Linda and fluctuates between writing poetry and performing. She wrote one rather unique piece for the show, a poem that runs counter to the popular youthful notion that to change the world, you storm a university. It was called "On Sitting In The President's Office Against The Door."

She plans to write books someday but loves to perform.

"Acting . . . it's sheer bliss," she says. "And to perform your material, that's special."

All four of them may someday get over this feverish case of mumps called youth. But all four of them have a unique talent for self-expression. That's a little more difficult to put into baskets.

A line from Judy's poem fits:

"How do you handcuff a thought?

"How do you fingerprint and book an idea?"

You can't, nor can you bury it in baskets.

Judge Scolds Herrera Case Prosecution

By ALAN JONES

Prosecutor Ernest C. Zunino was reprimanded twice by the judge yesterday as he cross-examined defense witnesses in the murder trial of Joaquin Antonio Herrera.

Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson flagged down Zunino once for telling a witness Herrera was a juvenile delinquent in Central America. No such evidence has been produced, Wilson said.

The second time, Zunino was reprimanded for asking a second witness about hearsay conversation.

Defense Attorney Harold J. Truett accused Zunino of trying to prejudice the jury with his questions, and the judge huddled with both lawyers after excusing the jury for the day.

Herrera is on trial for the Jan. 9 slaying of Ronald Lee Washburn, an Army cook whose body was found in a weed patch next door to Herrera's residence in San Rafael.

Two housewives who knew Herrera soon after he came to Marin testified yesterday he was "a perfect gentleman" and well-behaved.

But both told of several far-fetched stories he had told them.

Mrs. Pansy D. Clar of San Rafael said Herrera told her of breaking a man's neck when he was 13 for insulting his mother, of innocently igniting a major Hunter's Point riot in 1966, of sitting next to a man who was shot to death in a theater, and of walking all the way from Guatemala to the United States.

Herrera, a native of El Salvadore, was raised in Guatemala and first entered this country illegally from Mexico in 1963.

He was deported and re-entered the United States in 1966 on a visitor's visa.

Mrs. Dorothy Dowdall of San Rafael said Herrera told her his father had performed chest surgery on him and that was why he never grew tall. Herrera is five feet, one inch tall.

Mrs. Clar said that Herrera told her, after he was married to Kathy Bloomer, that "he hated Kathy's body, but loved her pretty voice."

Herrera's trial will enter its 11th day at 10 a.m. Tuesday. Judge Wilson told the jury the case will probably continue through all of next week.

FREE HIPPIE WASH IN L. A.

Dispelling the myth that Hippies hate to take a bath, a group of "Flower Children" from Sunset Strip in Los Angeles relished a shower yesterday at a church that offers free showers to neighborhood Hippies, whose lack of funds force them to go bathless. Clean and joyous are (from left) Mark Zimmer rubbing suds into his hair, Jim Kopperman, wearing shower cap, Andre Ninaug, with wet love beads, and Mark Zimmer, drying his hair and beard. Boycott Harry's Back In Cloud Of Confusing Olympic Strategy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Harry Edwards, who freely admits that everything he says shouldn't be believed, claims the Olympic boycott movement is far from dead. He also says that he might soon cause some trouble for a couple of National Football League teams.

Edwards, leader of the Negro Olympic boycott movement, said yesterday that contradictory statements made this week about the boycott by sprinter Lee Evans were just a sample of the confusion he has in mind for the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"I wouldn't believe what any black athlete says," the former sociology instructor at San Jose state told a news conference.

"I wouldn't even believe what I say. Right after this, I'm going to call another press conference to answer myself," Edwards added in jest.

Evans, world record holder at 400 yards, was quoted early in the week that the Olympic boycott was off and that he and other black athletes had voted to go to the Mexico City Games in October. Later, he said he never made the statements.

"Evans was instructed to make the statement," said Edwards, "then he was instructed to deny it."

Evans, sitting next to Edwards, confirmed that he had made both statements and added, "The boycott is on."

"Our whole strategy now," said Edwards is to create an atmosphere of chaos for the U.S. Olympic Committee. We will make statements one day and deny them the next and we will do this all the way to Mexico City."

Edwards also announced that the St. Louis Cardinals and Cleveland Browns would be the target of attacks if they didn't act to end what he called the racist situation on the teams.

He claimed that former Cleveland guard John Wooten, fired from the team in a racial squabble, had been white-listed by other NFL clubs.

Wooten, a Negro, and defensive back Ros Fichtner were both kicked off the team when Wooten accused Fichtner of excluding Negroes from a golf tournament he had promoted.

Of the Cardinals, Edwards said, "The brothers back there are treated like animals. The racist crackers that own the St. Louis team will be dealt with one way or another."

The Cardinals were wracked by racial tensions last season and Edwards said, "If some corrective steps are not taken soon then we will be obliged to act."

Edwards did not specify what kind of action would be taken but mentioned boycotts of games, picket lines around stadiums or "something more physical."

Edwards said he was trying to raise money to go to the Olympics himself and added wryly, "I may show up in Avery Brundage's kitchen and it won't be to drink coffee."

Brundage is chairman of the International Olympic Committee.

Packers Take 34-17 Victory

CHICAGO (AP) — The College All-Stars didn't win last night against the Green Bay Packers but they managed to score both against the Packers and for the pro teams for whom they will play.

The final score in the 35th annual midsummer football classic was 34-17 in favor of Green Bay.

It was an unprecedented fifth straight loss for the All-Stars in the series but it left the pros licking their chops waiting for their new draft choices to arrive.

It also produced a chink in the Green Bay armor—you can run against the Packers.

For the first time in three years an All-Star team dented the scoring column against the Packers.

Larry Csonka, the Syracuse All-American headed for the Miami Dolphins, turned out to be the game's leading ground gainer while the passing duo of Grey Landry and Earl McCullouch, both headed for the Detroit Lions, proved itself ready for pro football.

"You can't take a bunch of kids, no matter how good they are, and teach them pass defense in three weeks against Green Bay," said Coach Norm Van Brocklin.

WE CAN RUN

"We got action out of the boys but couldn't get the execution," said Van Brocklin. "But we proved again that a team can run against the Packers."

The Stars, a 17-point underdog, proved it by gaining 225 yards rushing against the Packers with Csonka netting 95 yards in 18 carries for a 5.3 average.

But in the long run it was Packer passing superiority, spearheaded by Bart Starr and culminated by Boyd Dowler and Carroll Dale that proved the undoing of the Stars before a crowd of 69,917.

Starr completed touchdown passes of 20, 36 and 13 yards to Dale, and in between he used Dowler and Elijah Pitts as receivers in setting up Green Bay's scoring arsenal.

Starr hit on a swing pass to Pitts early in the game for 72 yards to set up the first Packer touchdown.

DIFFERENT STORY

"He threw that one to our strength," said Van Brocklin. "We should have intercepted that pass. If we had, it might have been a different story."

Both All-Star touchdowns came in the second half on fourth-down plays and were passes to McCullouch.

Gary Beban of UCLA headed for the Washington Redskins, clicked to the Southern California speedster with a seven-yard strike in the third quarter. Landry, a Massachusetts product, hit McCullouch with a 24-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter.

But there were other outstanding performances from All-Star personnel.

Split end Bob Wallace of Texas-El Paso, who will play for the Chicago Bears, caught three passes for 31 yards and MacArthur Lane of Utah State, a rookie with the St. Louis Cards, netted 43 yards in eight rushes.

FROM BUTTERFLY TO BREAST STROKE — Robin Bachrach of the Marin Swim Club and Vicki Bitgood of the Tamalpais Swim Club, are pictured reviewing the results that enabled them to advance to the finals of the National Junior Olympics scheduled for August 7, in Knoxville, Tennessee. Both girls recently returned from the Western Regionals held in Fresno, July 30. Robin won first honors in the 13-14 age group for butterfly after turning in a time of 1:10.3 for the 110-yard event. Vicki took top honors in the 100-meter breast stroke for 13-14-years-olds.

Same Old Story For Perry: No Support, No Win By 3-1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Righthander Gaylord Perry's tough luck continued and Willie Mays' bad fortune came to an end last night as the San Francisco Giants ingloriously opened a home stand.

The snake-bit Perry again was the victim of nonsupport, dropping a 3-1 decision to the Pittsburgh Pirates despite a four-hitter.

Mays, suffering recently from a power deficiency, gave the Giants their only run off Al McBean with his 14th homer of the season in the eighth inning.

The aging Giant star's 400-foot blast into the left field seats was his 578th homer and represented his first round-tripper since July 12, and only his second since June 16.

Pittsburgh's Willie Stargel, from cross-Bay Alameda, equalized that blow with his 20th homer in the ninth inning. The Pirates' first two runs, however, were tainted.

They didn't collect their first hit until the fourth inning, but took a 1-0 lead in the third. With two outs, Maury Wills walked, went to second on a passed ball and scored on Willie McCovey's error.

Jerry May's line drive skipped past Ty Cline and into the right field corner for a triple leading off the fifth. May made it 2-0 on Perry's wild pitch.

The Giants had numerous scoring opportunities off McBean, now 9-9, but they failed to push the runs across — in a manner to which Perry has had to become accustomed.

"I'll have to wait four days and try again," said Perry, whose record dropped to 9-10 as his earned-run average lowered to 2.65. "You have to give McBean credit for the game he pitched."

While struggling through a 15-17 campaign in 1967, Perry fashioned a solid 2.61 ERA and was defeated by a single run nine times.

DON'T FEEL BAD

In his 10 losses this season, the Giants never have scored more than two runs in a game. In seven of the games, San Francisco has scored one or no runs, including three shutout setbacks.

"You don't feel so bad when you pitch well," Perry offered. "Not having many runs to work with is getting to be a habit, so I can't let it bother me too much."

The Giants attempted to square the series this afternoon, while looking forward to tomorrow's pregame festivities, which include an old-timers contest between Dodgers and Giants.

Television personality Sandy Koufax is expected to pitch for the Dodgers. Billy Pierce has the Giants' mound assignment. Harvey Kuenn, Dusty Rhodes, Ray Jablonski, Ed Bailey and Duke Snider will appear.

A's Sighting On Third After Whipping Tribe

CLEVELAND (AP) — Fifth place Oakland is still gunning for third place Cleveland's spot in the American League after closing the gap a bit with a 5-1 win over the Indians last night.

The Athletics put John "Blue Moon" Odom, 9-7, on the mound today in their quest for a fifth straight win. Cleveland banked on Sam McDowell, 11-9.

McDowell has a 3 to 1 edge in his encounters with Oakland, having fanned 15 of the A's in their last meeting. He also fanned 16 of them in their first game this season.

Oakland came out of Friday night's game 11½ games back of league leading Detroit. The A's are a half game behind fourth place Boston and 2½ behind Cleveland.

For the Indians it was the third straight loss and eighth in 11 games.

Dave Duncan drove in two runs with a single in the second for Oakland.

The A's made it 4-1 in the sixth as Rick Monday's single pushed one across and Mike Hershberger sacrificed in the other.

The last Oakland run came in the eighth when Bert Campaneris walked and Ted Kubiak walloped a triple.

Jim Nash notched his 9th win against 6 losses in scattering eight hits before being replaced by Lew Krause in the eighth.

Nash narrowly missed being hit when Jose Cardenal rammed a hit back across the mound in the seventh. Nash fell down in order to get out of the way.

Grid Trio Eyes Win Debut

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Phil Bengtson has made a winning debut with the Green Bay Packers. Paul Brown, Jim Dooley and Dick Nolan hope to follow suit today with the Cincinnati Bengals, Chicago Bears and San Francisco 49ers.

The world champion Packers made Bengtson's first game as Vince Lombardi's coaching replacement a success yesterday night with a 34-17 rout of the College All-Stars before 69,917 in Chicago.

Four more exhibition games are on tap today.

Brown, who sat out the last five seasons after a glamorous career with the Cleveland Browns, leads his fledgling Bengals, pro football's newest team, in an American Football League exhibition tonight against the Kansas City Chiefs. A full house of 30,000 is expected at the University of Cincinnati's Nippert Stadium, where the Bengals will play until their new stadium is completed.

Brown's 33-year career at all levels of coaching shows 296 wins, 75 defeats and 15 ties. But some lean years may be in store until the Bengals can build up to their AFL colleagues.

PRETTY NASTY

The collection of rookies and players obtained in the expansion draft will go against Kansas City, with veteran John Stofa, acquired in a trade with Miami, at quarterback. His chief target will be Warren McVea, a rookie from the University of Houston, who has been switched from halfback to end because of his blinding speed.

The Bengals don't expect the Chiefs to go easy on them because of their newness. "They can be pretty nasty," said Tom Bass, an assistant coach. "I'm afraid that's the way they will be against us."

In other night games, the Baltimore Colts are at Oakland and the 49ers visit San Diego for NFL-AFL tests. The Bears and Dallas Cowboys of the NFL tangle in an afternoon contest, the annual Hall of Fame Game at Canton, Ohio.

ALL-TIME GREATS

Dooley, a player and assistant coach for the Bears since 1952, has taken over from aging owner George Halas, who coached the team off-and-on for 32 seasons.

The following all-time greats will be inducted into the Hall of Fame during weekend ceremonies: Cliff Battles, Art Donovan, Elroy "Crazy Legs" Hirsch, Wayne Millner, Marion Motley, Charlie Trippi and Alex Wojciechowicz.

Quarterbacks Johnny Unitas of the Colts and Daryle Lamonica of the AFL champion Raiders are expected to put on a show before an expected crowd of 53,000 in Oakland. Nolan, San Francisco's new coach, will look over a quarterbacking trio of John Brodie, George Mira and Steve Spurrier against the Chargers.

Chargers Pin Hopes On Revamped Defense

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Chargers, still smarting from last year's drubbing by National Football League teams, field a remodeled defensive unit tonight against the San Francisco 49ers.

Apparently working on the premise that any change would be for the better, the revamped Charger defense contains only six starters from the final game of last year, and three of them have new positions.

The American League Chargers met disaster last year in preseason exhibition games with the Detroit Lions, Los Angeles Rams and Pittsburgh Steelers.

With all the changes, the defensive unit averages 2.7 years experience.

Coach Sid Gillan is pinning his scoring hopes on quarterback John Hadl who goes into the game with his throwing arm in good condition.

Hadl was handicapped last year by a sore arm and the absence of star receiver Lance Alworth.

Alworth will make his first appearance against National League competition.

Supreme Test For Hot Sohner

A red-hot Sohner Tree Service softball team will face the supreme test at 9 p.m. tonight in Santa Rosa when the San Anselmo club battles powerful Peninsula Paint of Pacific Grove in the State Tournament.

The Pacific Grove team has captured three tournaments this year and has won three of four meetings with the Fairchild Falcons of Mountain View, last year's number two team in the World Finals.

Morey Swarm, who pitched Sohner to an opening round 3-0 victory over San Mateo Thursday, will get the starting call for Sohner.

Unranked Netter Wins Meet Title

The Marin Junior Tennis Tournament went through its death throes yesterday at the Mill Valley Tennis Club, exiting from the sports scene for another year, in tune with the tone of the matches.

Paul Bortolazzo, unranked boy wonder from San Mateo who survived all the trials and tribulations of preliminary play, went on to sweep the slate clean.

It was Bortolazzo against Todd Overgard of Sunnyvale and number seven seed in the Boys 18 division. Bortolazzo lost the first set to Overgard with a stinging 2-6 score. He came back in the second to split sets by edging the Sunnyvale youth 9-7. In the decisive third set, Bortolazzo walked away from Overgard 6-3, and on to the tourney championship.

Mill Valley's Andy Moffat lost in his contest with Gary Fairman of Reno in Boys 16 singles. Fairman aced out the local with a 2-6, 6-2, 7-5 scorecard.

Steve Johnson, also of Reno, battled third ranked Bob Fisher of San Francisco to a 6-1, 6-1 win in Boys 14 singles.

The girls had the only matches that followed predictions. Kate Latham dueled Bonnie MacBride of Berkeley to an eventual 6-2, 6-4 victory in the 18-year-old division and blackened Bill Culver's aspirations by defeating her for the Girls 16 title, 6-1, 61.

Lamonica, Unitas Duel In Raider-Colt Battle

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland Raider quarterback Daryle Lamonica meets his boyhood idol, Johnny Unitas, of the Baltimore Colts in the opening exhibition game for both teams tonight, but warns that it may not be a fair test.

Unitas is beginning his 13th year as quarterback for the Colts and Lamonica, 26, the American Football League's Player of the Year in 1967, recalls his high-school days when he used to hang on Unitas' every move.

"I've been looking forward to the time when I'd be playing on the same field with a professional of Unitas' talents," he said.

But Lamonica notes that both he and Unitas will probably only play for one half during the pre-season test in the Oakland Coliseum. Both the Raiders and the National Football League Colts probably will use many rookies and reserves as well as limit the number of plays.

"I realize spectators in the stadium and fans around the country will make much of the final score, but it can't be an honest appraisal," Lamonica said.

Oakland Coach John Rauch plans to use two units — one made up mostly of returning from the 1967 squad and one with new players. The Colts are expected to do much the same.

Schollander Reign Clipped By Spitz

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Santa Clara's Mark Spitz ended the reign of teammate Don Schollander in the 200-meter freestyle and Eadie Wetzel of Wilmette, Ill., set a women's world 200 freestyle record of 2:08.8 last night in the AAU Swimming Nationals.

Three world marks, three meet records and an American club mark have been smashed in the meet, with 16 events and two days to go. The top eight in each event qualify for the Olympic Trials.

In almost every event, youngsters are taking over from the veterans. Miss Wetzel, 15, with a previous career best of 2:11.4, was pushed by Debbie Meyer, also 15, of Sacramento, Calif., who also beat the old world mark with 2:09.3. Miss Meyer's teammate, 14-year-old Sue Pedersen, held the pending world mark of 2:09.5, set in a relay four weeks ago.

"Did I expect a record?—Oh, gosh no," Miss Wetzel said.

Miss Pedersen, who pushed Debbie to a world 400 freestyle mark last night, came back to edge the world record holder, 18-year-old Claudia Kolb of Santa Clara, for the 400 individual medley crown in 5:10.3.

Gary Hall, a 5-foot-10, 150-pound junior from Garden Grove, Calif., edged Greg Buckingham, 23 and 6-4, to win the men's 400 medley in 4:48.0. Hall missed his pending world mark of 4:43.4.

The 18-year-old Spitz took the 200 in excellent time of 1:57.0, and admitted he was so worried about Schollander's famous finish that he forgot all about Canadian Ralph Hutton, four lanes to his right.

Hutton was second by an eyelash in 1:57.1.

Spitz didn't know the 22-year-old Schollander had slipped at the wall at 100 meters and was too far behind to catch up. Peru's Juan Bello was next to Spitz and right behind him with 1:57.7. Schollander had 1:58.4.

"If it wasn't for Bello, Hutton might have won the race," said Spitz's coach, George Haines. Spitz said: "I thought Don was going to take off and I didn't even see Hutton."

Spitz was well off Schollander's world mark of 1:55.7 set at year ago, but it was the fastest mass 200 finish in swimming history.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club, anchored by Don Havens in 53.0, set an American club and meet mark of 3:35.4 in the 400 freestyle relay after Santa Clara set a meet women's mark of 4:02.1, 1.1 seconds off its world mark.

Chisox Happily Lose Far Away

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Happiness for the Chicago White Sox is a home game in Milwaukee. They still lose, but at least they make money doing it.

The Sox took their road show to Wisconsin for the seventh time this season last night, drew well again, and lost again.

This time the Washington Senators did the hatchet job, chopping up the Sox 11-6 before a crowd of 20,662 in County Stadium—once the home of the National League Braves.

That brought Chicago's Milwaukee attendance to 187,756—an average of almost 27,000 per game. That's considerably better than the less than 10,000 per game they've drawn at home.

Artistically, playing in Milwaukee hasn't helped the ninth place Sox. Last night's loss was their sixth this year.

Elsewhere in the American League last night, Detroit nipped Minnesota 6-5, Oakland dropped Cleveland 5-1, Baltimore beat New York 4-1 and California split a twi-night doubleheader with Boston, winning 3-2 before losing 6-1.

Frank Howard drove in three runs for the Senators with a double and his 31st homer of the year while Camilo Pascual coasted to his 10th victory behind the 15-hit Washington attack.

Hansen, who made an unassisted triple play and whacked a grand slam homer the week before the Senators unloaded him, had a single and a double, drove in a run and scored one for the White Sox.

Bill Freehan drove in three runs with a double and a single for the front-running Tigers, who beat Minnesota.

Rookie Tom Murphy, just 2½ weeks away from induction into the Army, throttled Boston on six hits and the Angels beat the Red Sox in the first game of their doubleheader. California scored all its runs in the first inning against loser Juan Pizarro —two of them on Bubba Morton's double.

Western Open Is Wide Open

CHICAGO (AP) — The chase for the $26,000 winning jackpot of the Western Open Golf Tournament is becoming a closely packed stampede.

Bobby Nichols, the 1964 PGA champion, and George Archer, this year's fourth leading money winner, swing into today's third round sharing the lead at 136, six strokes under Olympia Fields' battered par.

Only one stroke away at 137 are Miller Barber, Homero Blancas, defending champion Jack Nicklaus, veteran Billy Maxwell and a 22-year-old Australian, Bob Stanton.

Nichols canned a 65-foot putt and a 60-foot chip shot en route to his 66 yesterday.

Archer matched the 66 by uncorking a four wood second shot that stopped five inches from the cup for an eagle three on the long 18th hole.

Only three strokes back at 139 were Bert Yancey and Kermit Zarley. In all, 20 players are within five strokes of the two leaders.

PLAYING BETTER

As the going gets hot, here is what some of the pace-setters have to say:

Nichols—"I am playing better than I have for a long time. I'm getting more birdie chances. The greens are fast but if you are a pro you should be able to putt on any type of green."

Archer—"I took nine clubs to the factory. I had new grips put on three woods, the grip tightened on my putter and a new longer shaft on my wedge."

GOOD SHORT GAME

Nicklaus—"I made a lot of putts in my opening round of 65 and I didn't in the second round. That sums it up."

Blancas—"I think I've gotten over my problems of hooking and slicing my drives."

Barber—"When my game gets off now I know what to do to get it back."

Maxwell—"My short game has to be good because a short man needs a short game on these long courses which are getting longer especially as one gets older."

Maxwell has gone without a victory since 1962.

San Rafael's Ron Cerrudo finished the second round with a par 71 to place him at a two round total of 145, three above par and nine strokes behind the leaders.

Don Hawkins, former San Rafael High golf star who is now attending Brigham Young University, fired a five over par 76 for his second round score. Added to his previous 80, Hawkins now stands with a combined 156.

N.L. ROUNDUP

No Cub Power Needed On 3-0

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Chicago Cubs don't need the bomb. At least not when Ken Holtzman is firing beebees at the opposition.

The Cubs, who had slammed 10 homers in their three previous games, didn't hit any Friday night, but Holtzman didn't need any in blanking St. Louis 3-0.

Holtzman allowed just two singles in boosting his record to 8-7 and in posting his third straight shutout. He blanked San Francisco 2-0 on seven hits July 24 and then shut out Los Angeles on four hits July 28.

The Cubs' fourth straight victory moved them to within one percentage point of the third-place Cincinnati Reds in the National League race. The Reds' game at Atlanta was rained out.

Houston edged Philadelphia 4-3, Pittsburgh nipped San Francisco 3-1 and the New York Mets defeated Los Angeles 3-2 in other National League action.

Holtzman was in complete control of the league-leading Cardinals, who must have thought they were trying to hit beebees instead of a baseball. The 22-year-old left-hander gave up a solid single to Julian Javier in the sixth inning and a bloop single to Tim McCarver in the seventh.

Mary Miller advanced to the championship by way of default from Andrea Barnes in Girls 14 play.

In a long-winded, three set match, the Boys 18 doubles team of Barry Brink and Andy Moffat finally edged the Dan Chadbourne-Todd Overgard combo 1-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Number one seeded team of Ron Miller and Gary Fairman maintained their esteemed stature by defeating John Hursh and Rich Andrews 8-6, 6-3 to capture the Boys 16 doubles title.

Top ranked doubles in the Boys 14 division, Doug Atkinson and Bob Fisher, subdued a second set challenge by Steve Johnson and John Buffington to romp to their division's championship 6-1, 6-4.

In the only two girls doubles matches, Belvedere's Bee Kilgore teamed up with Tiburon's Anne Lamott to form a second seeded team that eventually usurped top-ranked Andrea Barnes and partner Mary Miller 6-3, 6-1 in Girls 14 doubles play.

Andrea Barnes returned with Donna Kellock as her partner to upset second ranked Debbie Supple and Darby Auerbach, both of Belvedere, 6-4, 6-4. The Barnes-Kellock combination was enough to secure the Girls 18 doubles title.

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Top seeded Mary Ann Eisel, on the brink of defeat three times, scrambled her way to the women's semifinals of the Eastern Grass Court Tennis Championships yesterday. The men's favorite, Clark Graebner, also advanced.

Graebner, his overpowering serve working perfectly, eliminated Jaime Fillol of Chile 6-3, 11-9.

In the second men's singles match, unseeded Jim Osborne of Honolulu upset fourth-seeded Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex., 6-1, 6-4.

Miss Hogan, ranked 12th nationally, led 5-4 in the second set and was serving. But Miss Eisel broke her service and did it again in the 16th game to send the match into the third set.

Today is Saturday, August 3, the 216th day of 1968 with 150 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning star is Saturn. The evening star is Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1492 Christopher Columbus set sail from Spain for the New World.

In 1914 Germany declared war on France and England.

In 1958 the American submarine Nautilus completed the first undersea crossing of the North Pole.

A thought for the day: Elliot Paul said, "Patience makes women beautiful in middle age."

TIME AND TIDE

Department of Commerce, United States Coast Geodetic Survey. Times and heights of tides at San Francisco (Golden Gate):

The column of heights gives the elevation in feet of each tide above or below the plane of Coast Survey chart soundings. The depths are always additive to the chart depths unless preceded by a minus sign (-), when the numbers are subtracted from the depth given in the chart. Light-face type indicates a.m. times; bold-face type indicates p.m. times.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

South Forgot And Gave Defense A 'Maximum' Of Card Choices

Almost any bridge player in the world would make South's mistake in the hand shown today, but an expert who represents his country in the Bridge Olympics is not almost any player. Put yourself in South's seat and see if you would come a cropper, as he did.

LEADS CLUB

West led the nine of clubs, dummy played low, and East followed suit with the four of clubs. Bruce Elliott of the Canadian team played the four of clubs as a discouraging signal; and West, Shorty Sheardown, knew that his partner did not make any careless plays.

Coming to the correct conclusion, Sheardown switched to the ten of diamonds. Elliott ruffed, returned a heart to the ace and ruffed another diamond to defeat the contract.

You should be able to see just where declarer went wrong, but you don't have to sign an affidavit that you wouldn't have made the same mistake if you had been playing the hand. See if you can spot declarer's error before you read on.

EARLY PLAY

South's error came very early. He should have covered the nine of clubs at the first trick with dummy's jack.

South couldn't tell that the opponents were ready to ruff, but his actual play of a low club from dummy allowed East either to win the trick or to let West win the trick. If South had played the jack of clubs from dummy he would have forced East to win the trick.

GIVE CHOICES

From declarer's point of view it must be better to give the opponents a minimum of choices than to allow them to choose for themselves where they want to win a trick.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes.

You hold:

♥ 10 8 7 5 3
♦ None
♣ A K Q 10 7 4

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs.

You will jump to four hearts at your next turn, thus showing great strength in those two suits. If your partner has a solid trump suit and ability to win the first or second trick in one of the unbid suits, he should make a cue bid. You will accept a slam invitation if partner can bid spades, but you will sign off at five hearts if partner bids diamonds.

Sales Tax Held A Boon To City

CHICAGO (AP) — Just how powerful is the sales tax as a revenue producer?

Californias last year collected $1.06 billion from this source — more than any other state. Four other heavily populated states — Illinois, Michigan, New York and Pennsylvania — each drew more than one-half billion dollars.

Hidden Beneath Hoopla Are Crucial Decisions

Delegates from the 50 states, plus the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, will gather Monday in Miami Beach to begin the business of selecting a Republican candidate for President of the United States. And everyone within reach of a television station will have a ringside seat.

What's seen and heard from the convention hall in Miami Beach will be the big show that constitutes the final act of the nomination. Before it, of course, has gone much campaigning, much dickering and infighting, much planning and organizing.

Because of the varied nature of presidential preferential primaries in the states — and because only 11 states and the District of Columbia hold any sort of primary to instruct convention delegates — the choice of candidate remains at question until the convention.

THE OBVIOUS front-runner as the Republican delegates assemble in Miami Beach is Richard M. Nixon, former California senator and former vice president who is now a New York resident. But whether Nixon has the necessary delegate commitments in advance is something that cannot be determined. His press-agents and some of the political pundits say he has. One, Bruce Biossat of NEA Service, claims Nixon has 100 extra votes on the first ballot. But others who have assessed the delegations just as carefully contend he is 100 or more votes short. Who is right on this will not develop until the roll is called. The pollsters and computers are helpless here.

Nixon's principal rival for the nomination is Gov. Nelson M. Rockefeller of New York, who entered the race late but has been running hard. The polls mostly show Rockefeller as the public favorite, and give him the best chance of defeating either of the Democratic aspirants — Hubert H. Humphrey and Eugene J. McCarthy — in November. But again, the polls mean nothing. It is the convention delegates who will decide, and many of them are committed initially to "favorite sons" or are uncommitted and not talking.

In the wings, hoping for a "Mexican standoff" between the two rivals, is the "non candidate," California's Gov. Ronald Reagan. He has the votes of the 86 California delegates, second largest bloc in the convention (the largest, New York's 92, is split between Rockefeller and Nixon). He has perhaps 100 additional votes pledged in advance. His hope is that if neither Nixon nor Rockefeller appears able to gather the 667 votes needed to nominate, other delegates will turn to him as compromise choice.

IN THIS POWER STRUGGLE is drama that emerges only partially from amid the hoopla and partisan trappings of the convention.

Those who watch the convention on television, despite their ringside seats, will see only a tiny bit of what is really going on — of the buttonholing of delegates who may not be committed, of the earnest conversations assessing the candidates and their chances, of the hotel room huddles in which "big deals" are attempted and sometimes made.

There has been much talk of a "free convention" — mostly directed at the Democrats. The Republican convention opening Monday appears to be about as free as such an operation can be.

What it does, in selecting a candidate and — to a minor extent — in adopting a platform, will weight in advance the decision possible by voters in November. And it may do much to determine whether there will be domestic tranquility in the United States and peace in the world.

The circus trappings of the convention itself will hide its importance, even from those who watch.

ROSCOE DRUMMOND

Russ Pressure Cannot Return Status Quo To Czechoslovakia

WASHINGTON — Whatever the immediate results of the cold confrontation between Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union, things are not going to be the same as before Prague began its sensational reforms.

Bear in mind that what is happening in Czechoslovakia is not an anti-Communist revolt. It is a revolt by Communists within the Communist party. It is a pro-Communist revolt by those who want to make communism more effective and more popular.

In the end the Kremlin cannot reverse this movement for greater political freedom in Czechoslovakia. Even if in desperation the Soviets by raw power should seize and occupy Czechosolvakia the way the Chinese seized and occupied Tibet, the Kremlin would, I believe, lose far more than it would gain.

It would gain an enemy and divide the Communist world. It would wreck all prospect of a U. S.-Soviet detente. It would re-cement NATO and draw de Gaulle back into its ranks. It would mean a return to the coldest period of the cold war. Czechoslovakia would be the temporary loser but the Soviet Union would not be the winner. Far from it.

THUS FAR, the effect of the Kremlin's heavy political pressure and carefully exposed threats of military intervention has been to galvanize popular support among support among Czechoslovakian Communists and non-Communists and to strengthen the hand of Alexander Dubcek and the other Czech party officials.

Why is the Soviet politburo so concerned, so worried, so hostile to the liberalization program which Prague is carrying out?

Why should the Russians send nearly its entire politburo to warn the Czechs that they must cancel these reforms — or else?

The Soviet leaders have often said that there are "different roads" to communism and that any Communist country should be free to travel its own road.

They have often said that one Communist country should not interfere in the internal affairs of another Communist country.

BUT NOW the Kremlin is telling the Czech Communists that they must travel Moscow's "road" and is saying this while Soviet armor is mounting along the Czech frontiers.

Obviously, the Kremlin is alarmed by what it sees happening in its once pliant and Stalinesque neighbor. The differences between Moscow's road to communism and the way Prague wants to try are deep.

The Czech Communist party wants to rule "with the voluntary support of the people."

Moscow thinks it is perilous to try to rule by voluntary support.

The Czech Communist party wants its decisions to be widely debated in public and to merit popular support.

Moscow prefers to hand down its decisions from the top and insure support by whatever means necessary.

The Czech Communists ended censorship.

Moscow sees such freedom of speech as perilous and is demanding that Prague restore censorship.

THE CZECH Communists believe that communism can neither rule effectively nor survive if it exerts "monopoly" power over everything, that a far wider participation by both party members and non-members in decision-making is necessary.

Moscow is horrified at the prospect.

These are the real reasons the Soviets are saying to Prague: Don't do it; stop it now.

But Czechoslovakia is not alone. Tito supports Prague; so does Romania and, in some degree, Hungary. The Italian Communists are backing Prague and, in some degree, the French. And there are others.

Moscow will not easily have its way.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Johnson Picture Held Objectionable

Ministers Support All In Conscience

In Vernon M. Brown's letter in the July 26 I-J, he questioned the sincerity of the ministers who aided the nine servicemen who resigned from the military services because for them military service violated the demands of their consciences. Mr. Brown challenged the statement of some of these ministers that they also support the "willing" servicemen.

As a member of St. Andrew Presbyterian Church, from which the nine were arrested, I can vouch for the fact that the ministers at that church do express sympathy and comfort for servicemen (and their families) who are in Vitenam. I have noted this on several occasions, but such recognition was again accorded a serviceman openly in the July 28 morning Sunday service by Mr. (Don) Schilling, the preacher.

I believe these ministers are attentive to the voice of God and support all who conscientiously are trying to obey God's will, recognizing that each one will interpret God's will for himself and not necessarily the same as all other men. And they have further stated many times that our interpretation of God's will must be disciplined by intelligence.

Votes For 18-Year-Olds Should Be Up To States

By EVERETT McKINLEY DIRKSEN

MIAMI — On the day before opening of the Republican National Convention here in Miami, and just a few weeks before the Democrats' convention in Chicago, it is fitting that we think about the proposals for lowering the voting age.

There are arguments both for and against granting the right to vote in the national elections to all Americans who have reached the age of 18. There is the usual, long-time argument that if an American is old enough to fight as a member of our armed services, he is old enough to vote. And there is the usual argument against the proposal that anyone at age 18 does not have the maturity or judgement necessary to exercise the voting privilege. Neither of those two arguments is quiet the nub of the matter. There are other and more pertinent arguments. First, consider the history of suffrage.

The 14th Amendment to the Constitution contains many provisions. When it became effective just 100 years ago, it said, among other things, that if a state denied to any male citizen of the United States who was 21 years of age the right to vote, the state's basis of representation in the Congress "shall" be reduced. (Actually, that has never happened, even though some states have been charged with a denial of the voting privilege.) Denial of the vote pertained to males of 21. Obviously, that provision excluded women and those under 21.

IT WAS NOT until 1920 that the 19th Amendment to the Constitution, which stated that the right of citizens to vote could not be denied or abridged because of sex, became effective. Women fought for more than half a century for the right to vote.

It seems surpassing strange that women were for so long denied the right to vote. From the standpoint of interest in national affairs, knowledge, background and perceptiveness, women then and now probably exceed the generality of men when it comes to an intelligent approach to politics. But the question of the female vote was one of those quaint legacies of the common law and the doctrine of coverture.

THERE ARE TWO facts of our modern world that support the idea of granting the vote to all Americans who have reached age 18.

The first is that the growth of all forms of communication places before all of us, whether we be young or old, such wealth of authentic information on political and government matters that a voter can become informed on candidates and issues even if he offered only a passive attention to what he sees and hears.

The second is that the American system of education does accent the social and political sciences and it does stimulate a healthy interest — and at an early age — in governmenta affairs.

When all is said and done about this important proposal, it would appear to be a wise course indeed to submit it to the various states in the form of a constitutional resolution. Four of the 50 states — Georgia, Kentucky, Alaska and Hawaii — already permit voting at age 18. California is currently involved in the political, legal and constitutional arguments concerning it. Let the rest of the states determine whether the voting privilege should be extended to those who are 18.

Promises Killed Merit Plan For Judges, Say Rumors

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Sacramento rumors have it that so many judgeships were promised legislators to pass the "merit plan" for selection of judges that the bill really would have been meaningless for two years — until all the promised judicial robes could have been passed out.

One legislator reportedly was promised executive support for any bill he wanted, with a pricetag on the bill of up to $1 million. The legislator reportedly was so opposed to the bill that he turned the offer down flat.

The bill, one of Governor Reagan's pets, was supposed to take politics out of judicial selection by setting up commissions to screen candidates for judgeships, according to its supporters. Its opponents, however, said it was a sham, and merely would substitute the politics of the bar hierarchy for those of the governor.

The plan will be revived next year, and a new crop of political debts will be sown.

CONFLICT of interest was cited by the state attorney general in 1943 when T. Fred Bagshaw had to resign either from the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District board of directors or from the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

Now, Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, has won legislature approval of a bill that would require that one-third of the members of an expanded bridge board be county supervisors. Bagshaw was just 25 years ahead of his time.

COL. DALE LUEHRING, who took over Thursday as general manager of the bridge district, clearly is going to be a very different kind of general manager than 70-year-old James Adam.

Luehring is unlikely to regard his new position as a throne, and seems to appreciate how much the district's relations with the public and other public agencies suffered because of Adam.

Contrary to previous speculation, Adam reportedly will not be hired by the district either as a consultant or lobbyist. "He'd do more harm than good to the district," said one of his fans on the bridge board.

ELECTION YEAR confusion has voters mixed up, but San Rafael boasts a mixed-up building.

The schizoid structure is near the west end of Fourth Street, and has a large "Kennedy headquarters" sign above the door.

But in its windows are placards promoting the candidacy of Philip Drath and Eugene McCarthy.

Turns out that Drath headquarters has taken over the Kennedy headquarters, but no one has had the time — or heart — to take down the Kennedy sign.

ON THE BLACKBOARD in the capitol newsroom this week: "Legislators go home now — we've had enough!"

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

Aug. 3, 1958

The House Interior Committee approved legislation designed to speed consideration of a proposal for a Point Reyes National Seashore recreation area, and directors of the Marin County Farm Bureau decided to take no official stand on the proposal.

Claude R. Brown of Novato, a watchman at Stafford Dam near Novato, narrowly escaped being shot by a deer hunter who shouted, "I'll shoot anything that moves."

Aug. 3, 1948

Despite an angry protest from a resident of Red Hill Avenue in San Anselmo, San Rafael city councilmen took no action on a proposal to find a new name for the "Miracle Mile" along that street, contending the name "would eventually wear off by itself."

Bouquets—And No Brickbats

BOUQUETS to the Sausalito School District Board, which, although it earlier had held a 20-cent raise in the tax ceiling was necessary and won approval for that raise, adopted a budget which calls for a 12½-cet cut from last year's rate: from $3.225 to $3.105 for $100 assessed valuation. The board showed its desire to meet public demands to hold the rate down, even though it could have gone higher under the permission voted it.

BOUQUET to Clara Evans for her excellent work in building up the Louise A. Boyd Museum during her four years as its director, and regret that she has decided to resign from the position.

BOUQUETS to David C. Brown and Richard Beban, young men of vision and ideas who propose a drop-in youth center to add another dimension to the public service they do through Switchboard of Marin. The project may present some difficulties, but it is what youth claims is needed.

Incongruity In 'Disarmament' Stand

(Reprint from St. Louis Post-Dispatch

President Johnson's evident desire to leave office with a record of having set the world on the path to nuclear disarmament is a worthy ambition.

And yet we cannot help agreeing with Senator Clark of Pennsylvania when he notes the incongruity of these efforts with the simultaneous advocacy of an $82 billion military budget. The House Appropriations Committee, in approving $72.7 billion for military spending last week, reduced the President's requests by several billions, but all the same the measure represents the largest single arms appropriation since the peak years of World War II. Senator Clark wants to know why some of these expenditures, which would themselves accelerate the arms race, cannot be postponed as an earnest of good faith in the quest for disarmament. It is a good question.

The same question arises from a position paper on arms control issued by Senator McCarthy, reportedly in consultation with two outstanding scientists who have been close to the problem for many years — Dr. Jerome Wiesner of M.I.T., who was President Kennedy's scientific adviser, and Dr. George B. Kistiakowsky of Harvard, who held the same post under President Eisenhower.

The McCarthy paper makes the point that, in addition to moving toward negotiation with the Soviets, "there is a great deal we can achieve simply by having the courage to exercise self-restraint in our own military activities." So he proposes a delay in deployment of the Sentinel antiballistic missile, which is supposed to protect us against a Chinese missile threat that does not exist, and in deployment of new Poseidon and Minuteman offensive missiles, which are ostensibly a response to Soviet ABM developments of a restricted nature. This can be done, he argues, without any real sacrifice of security. In return, we could ask that the Soviets also freeze their strategic weapons development, and that this moratorium become the basis for serious long-range negotiations on comprehensive nuclear arms control.

SPUR CREATIVITY IN OTHERS

What is a sure way to stifle creativity in children? Stanley Krippner, researcher at New York's Maimonides Medical Center, lists the following "commandments" that sabotage original thought and action in youngsters:

Everything you do must be useful.
Everything you do must be perfect.
Everything you do must be successful.
Everyone you know must like you.
Do not prefer solitude to togetherness.

Children need solitude and independence for thinking and dreaming, Mr. Krippner asserted. Even imperfect or unsuccessful creative efforts should be encouraged, he added, because individual thinkers may have to go against accepted ideas or norms.

Most of us are tempted at times to wish that others were made in our own image and likeness. We can forget in practice that they were created in God's — and that fact should prompt us to respect the independence of thought that others may show.

"He endowed them with strength like His own, and made them in His own image."
(Sirach 17:3)

Let me accord to others, Holy Spirit, the legitimate self-expression that I wish for myself.

THE CYNIC'S CORNER By Interlandi

"Trouble with you is you have no faith in polls!"

The Country Parson

"Often we have not quite enough religion to keep us from sinning but just enough to keep us from enjoying it."

SERVING AS assistant manager of the rooming department for the forthcoming four-day district assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses in Santa Rosa next Thursday through Sunday is Daniel Dinniene of San Rafael, shown with his wife, Lisl. The convention is expected to draw more than 6,000 persons.

Ministers' Wives Face Life On Move

Any one of several comfortable cliches could be the slogan of a group of Jehovah's Witnesses women, wives of traveling supervisory ministers.

Essentially, "home is where you hang your hat" is the theme of the living pattern of such wives as Elaine Green, wife of William H. Green, circuit minister of Jehovah's Witnesses in the Northern Bay Area, including San Rafael.

San Rafael serves as "home base" for Mrs. Green since her mother, Mrs. Esther J. Kitchel, and brother, Wayne D. Kitchel, are residents of San Rafael. Kitchel serves as the assistant presiding minister of the San Rafael Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses.

The work of such wives is to accompany their husband on their traveling ministerial assignments. Some wives solve the woman's problem of "needing roots" by living in mobile homes. Others stay in homes with members of local congregations or sometimes commercial rooms.

Three such traveling ministers and their wives are now in Santa Rosa working with others making preparations for the "Good News for All Nations" District Assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses to be held at the Sonoma County Fairgrounds, next Thursday through Sunday.

Two other travelers are Ellie Durell of Santa Rosa and Elizibeth Van Ike of Redwood City. Mrs. Durell's husband, James, serves as circuit minister of Sonoma County and parts of Napa and Mendocino counties. Mrs. Van Ike's husband, Malcome, serves as circuit minister for the Southern San Francisco peninsula area.

"Traveling with our husbands is the most satisfying work we can do. Our husbands have the responsibilities of supervising the ministry in each congregation we visit. William has 16 congregations in his circuit. Since we stay at each congregation for one week, it takes about four months to make the rounds. I get real satisfaction from assisting in the teaching program," Mrs. Green stated.

Concerning problems involved in being constantly on the move, Mrs. Van Ike remarked, "It has some drawbacks, but we enjoy traveling. It is such a wonderful opportunity to meet and make friends. Teaching the Bible is the most rewarding work anyone can do."

The women find themselves on a fairly rigid schedule for household duties. "Monday is considered a free day," Mrs. Van Ike said. "Since we pull a mobile home, I can take that time to do the washing and ironing."

A non-mobile home traveler, Mrs. Green commented, "On Monday I look for a convenient place to shop and catch up on personal matters. Working with the hospitable local members of a congregation helps to work out things like this very nicely."

"I don't miss having a house too much," laughed Mrs. Durell. "Of course it's very normal to want these things, however, we enjoy our work and do not have time to worry about such things. If you have a home on wheels, though, it's like actually taking your home right with you."

The three maintain that their lives as wives of traveling ministers are really no different from that of the biblical Sarah, wife of Abraham. "She went everywhere with him, and they lived in a tent," declared Mrs. Van Ike.

Council Discussion On TV Tomorrow

"Report from Uppsala," a discussion of the recent meeting of the World Council of Churches in the Swedish town of Uppsala, will be telecast on "Lamp Unto My Feet" at 8 a.m. tomorrow on Channel 5.

Among those present at the meeting, the Fourth Assembly of the World Council of Churches, were the two guests who will appear on the broadcast, the Rev. Albert Van Den Heuvel, director of the department of communication for the World Council of Churches, and Mrs. Theodore Wedel, associate general secretary, National Council of Churches.

Civilian Chaplains Urged For Troops

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Military chaplains are subject to two authorities—their unit commanders and their religious calling. The question often is raised today about whether the dual directions work together.

The practice by which clergymen are put in uniform, commissioned, paid and controlled by the armed forces, is "fundamentally incompatible with faithful performance of their sacred mission," says the American Jewish Congress.

It urges a change to a civilian chaplaincy for American troops. The matter also has come up in other religious circles, and the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. recently gathered reactions about it from chaplains themselves.

COMMENTS

"I don't preach LBJ doctrine and don't have to," said one of them. "The men want to hear the Gospel. The assumption that we aren't free is absurd."

Said another: "The sooner the churches revise the entire system, the better it will be. A definite decision about our primary allegiance is called for. Will it be God first or nationalism first?"

At present, about 4,100 American clergymen are in uniform, serving as chaplains in the Army, Navy and Air Force at bases in this country and abroad, and on the battlefields of Vietnam.

They include about 1,071 Catholic priests, 68 rabbis and 2,966 Protestant and Orthodox clergymen. They have officer's rank, receive government pay, and are under military regulations.

LONG-STANDING

Although the U.S. Constitution bars any establishment of religion, the military chaplaincy has existed since the time of the American Continental Army.

In regard to various questions about the system, the United Presbyterian Church's Dement of Chaplains and Service Personnel has issued a report entitled, "The Military Chaplaincy—Captive or Free?"

It consists largely of responses from chaplains in the field. They are not quoted by name, as the replies were considered private. Their ranks ranged from Army captain to colonel to Navy lieutenant commander.

On the question of whether the military structure inhibited them from proclaiming the pure Gospel and whether they were free to preach the church's concern for peace and the full Lordship of Christ, here are some responses:

"—Some are willing to speak their minds, others are willing to settle for security."

—"It is not the structure per se but the quality of the man."

"AFRAID TO SPEAK"

—"In my experience as a chaplain I feel a greater freedom in or out of the pulpit than 90 per cent of my civilian colleagues. In California I found ministers afraid to speak their minds because the session was ruled by members of the John Birch Society. Civilian ministers are muzzled far more than military chaplains."

—"I'm an infantry chaplain in Vietnam. I have preached against war, even the war in Vietnam. The pulpit from which I preach has been free, is free and always will be free. Command has never called me down. Command, in fact, attends church."

Asked if they're obliged to support military-government policies and use officially approved courses on morale building and whether the material is in keeping with their convictions, some of them said:

—"The character guidance program has its canned materials but no honest chaplain gives it as packaged. The program is basically a command responsibility, with the chaplain as one of the instructors."

—"I really doubt that it is worth the effort spent on it."

—"I agree that a lot of the materials are 'canned'—canned corn. The troops don't like corn. They prefer more open and vital discussions. The troops are not easily 'snowed.'"

—"There's much room for prophetic functioning. Yes, one can talk effectively about loving one's enemy."

"NOT BRAINWASHED"

—"Chaplains are not a group of brainwashed clergymen serving as rationalizers of everything the government and the military do."

—"They bump heads with commanders and establishment at times. If not, they fail first as men."

—"I find among our chaplains the whole range between doves and hawks. I find myself free to express my point of view."

—"A man can allow his career to be his god. A man can be given a bad efficiency report because he is not gung-ho about the killing aspect of war."

Asked if the church itself should take over management and financing of civilian chaplains to the armed forces, some said:

"The church does not have the financial resources. It would cost approximately $54 million just for salaries."

"One cannot assign a civilian with the military who is not subject to the rules of the military."

"If I were a soldier looking for help, I would want a chaplain who knew the workings of the organization inside out. I would not feel very easy with someone physically present but not really part of the machinery."

Copeland Installed As Minister

The Rev. Gary R. Copeland has been officially installed as the minister of the new Marin Covenant Church located in Mariwood.

His support, as well as that of the new congregation, comes under the sponsorship of the Evangelical Covenant Church of America, with headquarters in Chicago, Ill.

Copeland, a native of San Mateo, attended the University of California and graduated from Wheaton College in Wheaton, Ill. In 1966 he graduated from Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, and he has recently arrived from Chicago where he spent a year in residence at the denomination's North Park Theological Seminary.

While in Pasadena he served for three years as minister of youth at the Pasadena Covenant Church. His final year there was in full-time capacity working exclusively with high school and college students. This past year he served as the associate minister of the Elgin Covenant Church in Elgin, Ill.

Copeland, and his wife, Joyce, live in Marinwood at 664 Cedarberry Lane, where their home serves as temporary headquarters for the church. In September worship services will begin in the Marinwood Community Center and eventually the church will build on its five-and-a-half-acre hilltop site at the end of Ellen Drive behind the community center.

Anglicans Hold To Stand Favoring Birth Control

By GODFREY ANDERSON

LONDON (AP) — The world wide Anglican Communion repeated its stand this week favoring artificial methods of birth control in the face of Pope Paul's ruling that Roman Catholics must not use them.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Michael Ramsey, after meeting with the steering committee of the Lambeth Conference, issued a statement reaffirming the decision of the 1958 conference that the means of limiting the children in a family are "a matter for the consciences of each husband and wife."

He explicitly added that this did not exclude the use of artifical means of contraception banned by Pope Paul in an encyclical Monday.

"The changes in human society and world population," said the archbishop, "as well as the development in the means available for contraception which have occurred since 1958, seem to me to reinforce rather than to challenge the argument employed and the conclusions reached at the Lambreth Conference of 1958.

The presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church of the United States, the Rt. Rev. John E. Hines, issued a similar statement.

Saying that the Eipiscopal Church had always supported family planning and birth control by appropriate medical means, Bishop Hines went on: "We believe such action to be an aid to sound and healthy marriage, as well as a necessity in the grim struggle against poverty, hunger, even famine, in many parts of the world. . . .

"To this end we are actively supporting programs encourageing family planning as part of the Episcopal Church's efforts in the field of world relief. our concern, sympathy and support are also with the many in any Christian church who share our convictions and work for the same purpose."

Bishop Ralph Dean of Canada, who is secretary of the conference, said the Lambeth Conference steering committee was of 12 archbishops and bijm was entirely of one mind with the Archbishop of Canterbury on the birth control question.

The archbishop's statement had not yet come before the 467 bishops at the conference, he said, but he had every reason to believe all would endorse its terms.

Asked at a news conference what effect the Pope's decision might have on Anglican-Roman Catholic relations, Bishop Dean said: "We intend to keep on talking with the Roman Catholic Church as long as they want to talk with us. But it will certainly highlight the fact that there are obvious disagreements between us."

There was discussion among Britain's four million Roman Catholics and their 8,000 priests. Priests who have been granting absolution at confession to methods now banned by the Pope were particularly troubled.

6,000 Youths Attend Baptist World Meeting

Six thousand young people from sixty countries attended the seventh Baptist World Youth Conference in Berne, Switzerland July 22-28.

Meeting under the theme, "One World, One Lord, One Witness" were delegates from all over the world including South Vietnam and several Iron Curtain countries.

Among the speakers were Dr. Paul Tournier, internationally known Swiss doctor, Miss Annie Vallotton, French artist, and illustrator of the Biblical translation "Good News for Modern Man," and Billy Graham, American evangelist.

Program leaders included Gunnar Hogland of the United States, chairman, Joseph A. Adegbite, Nigeria, vice chairman, and William J. Reynolds, director of music.

Music was provided by the orchestra of Baylor University, Waco, Tex., and a six hundred voice youth choir.

But he also incorporates into his course of instruction the spinning, blending and dyeing of the yarns. He has conducted a number of classes in Marin County.

THE WHEELS TURN

Americans Are Spinning Again, As They Take Up An Old Craft

By DON KEOWN

"There's an old spinning wheel in the parlor, spinning dreams of the long, long ago. . . ."

So go the lyrics to an old song, seldom heard anymore.

Like the tune, the term "parlor" has just about disappeared from the American lexicon. And spinning wheels are rarely seen nowadays outside of historical museums.

But, says Robert J. Harris of Berkeley, the spinning wheel, if not the song or parlor, is at the beginning stage of a comeback. Soon it, or devices like it, may once again become a familiar sight in American homes and studios.

HARRIS BASES that prediction upon his personal experience and knowledge. He is a teacher of weaving. But he also teaches the spinning, blending and dyeing of the yarns. And he has found a keen interest among Bay Area students in such a comprehensive course.

Several of his classes have been conducted in Marin County, including one now under way on the barge Omphale at Gate Six, Sausalito, and one planned for the near future under Marin Cooperative Center auspices in Corte Madera.

Harris says that the classes have attracted such attention "that often we are virtually on a 'waiting list" basis."

HARRIS GRADUATED from the University of California School of Social Work in the early 1940s, "then decided to do a few things I wanted to do before settling down to that profession."

"What he wanted to do" were crafts. So he enrolled at the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, studying weaving, pottery-making, jewelry-making and similar skills.

He continued at these largely on a hobby basis in the following years while operating a furniture design and construction shop. Later he taught the textile arts in the Job Corps program in Pleasanton until that phase was discontinued.

SINCE THEN, he has been busy as a crafts instructor at the Adobe Art Center in Castro Valley and at other locations in Northern California.

Harris says he was struck by the fact that the potters were developing their own glazes and clay bodies before producing their pieces, whereas the weavers were starting out with materials — the yarns — produced by other persons.

"It seemed to me," he says, "that the weaver would benefit if he had the full control of all the processes of his craft in the same manner as the potter. I felt it would contribute to his work if he had a better understanding of the basic materials that went into the very structuring of the yarns and into the dying of both the natural and synthetic fibers."

THUS HARRIS launched a curriculum of integrated study that included spinning with various devices, blending of different fibers for specific purposes, the dyeing of them to attain desired colors, and then ultimately the actual weaving.

Harris previously has conducted three such classes in Marin County under YWCA auspices.

He also has taught under YW auspices on Sutter Street and in

THE DEVICE being used here by Robert J. Harris of Berkeley to spin yarns is the drop spindle which he says is the machine used over most of the world by spinners. It is also the favorite spinning device of the students who make up Harris' weaving classes in Marin County and in communities throughout Northern California. Harris says that a considerable upsurge of interest in spinning is taking place. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

Bay Area Instructor Helps Spark Renewed Interest In Spinning Yarn

Weaving Teacher Insists His Students Master The Art From Its Beginning

THE NAVAJO SPINDLE and how it is operated by holding it against the knee is demonstrated by Robert J. Harris. It is, he says, the simplest of the various spinning devices and the easiest for the beginner to master.

Chinatown in San Francisco and in downtown Oakland. He has given the course in Mountain View, Hayward, Castro Valley, Walnut Creek and Berkeley.

The course runs for eight weeks.

HARRIS SAYS the needed materials are not expensive.

"Dye substances may be obtained from any supermarket, or out of the garden, fields, meadows and mountains," he says. Marin students have had great success with dyes from lichen gathered from the bark of trees and from the rocks of mountains and the seashore.

Harris has three different kinds of spinning devices.

His Finnish spinning wheel looks very much like the old ones associated with early American history. Recently he introduced the Navajo spindle and says that "people have taken to it quite readily." But the most commonly used in classes for all-purpose spinning is the drop spindle, the smallest of the three.

OF THE LAST, he says: "It is used over most of the world, to this day. Even the famous Normandy lace-makers use it to spin their flax. And Egyptian men spin yarns for rugs with it."

The large wheel does have the advantage of faster winding, he says.

And the Navajo spindle is somewhat easier for the beginner to operate.

Harris says that both sexes and people of all ages are taking up spinning. But he is somewhat disappointed that the women so greatly outnumber the men in his classes.

"THAT IS THE result of a fallacious belief that through history, the spinners and weavers generally have been women," he says.

In the United States, where weaving and spinning had an agricultural background as a cottage industry, it was true that the women did this work. The men were too busy in the fields and on the range.

There have been two other exceptions as well, Harris admits. The Navajo women, too, did the spinning and weaving. "They learned from male Zuni and Hopi slave captives because their own men were warriors and hunters." And in Scandinavian, except for Denmark, the weavers are almost always women.

BUT ELSEWHERE, says Harris, the men have been the major spinners and weavers, "especially when it is a matter of making a living."

Harris says spinning seems to appeal to all age groups "including entire families."

"I have had a lot of fun and success with family groups including children as young as 9," he reports. "Actually 9 to 12-year-olds can generally outspin their parents in a short time. Manual dexterity matures early."

Teen-agers, he adds, seem to love spinning.

"PEOPLE interested in eastern philosophy and such also seem to derive a special enjoyment from spindle spinning," he continues. "They say the hand movements cause them to relax, and that it conditions the body to do what it is supposed to do."

The "hippie crowd," attracted by the back-to-nature quality of the craft, and the "peace crowd," attracted by its tranquility, are also well represented among Harris' students, and seem to the instructor to show a special creativity.

The fibers used range from dog, cat and goat hair through all the various sheep wools to such rare and exotic sources as vicuna. Linen and ramie (from the papyrus plant) are also often used in the spinning.

SOME DACRON is used as a filler "and goes with the natural fibers beautifully."

Harris says his students show a preference for bright colors and lots of them.

After the spinning, he does his own weaving on an upright Navajo frame, or a four-harness loom.

But it is the spinning phase of the overall process that he and his students now find especially fascinating.

THEY AREN'T in the parlor as they work. And they aren't "spinning dreams of the long, long ago."

What they are spinning is yarn that will go into imaginative and decorative rugs and wall hangings, the two favorite products of the people, usually numbering from 10 to 20 at a time, who make up the classes of Robert Harris.

A Hotline — San Rafael To Wall Street

Marin-Based Firm Keeps In Touch With Financial Hubs

When you think of the heady world of high finance, your thoughts automatically turn to such major monetary centers as New York's Wall Street or San Francisco's Montgomery Street.

But for those in the know, thoughts are turning more and more to San Rafael.

Investment Indicators and Research Management Co. at 1010 B Street, which opened in Marin only five years ago, has already reached a position where it has attracted both national and international attention.

THE FIRM HAS clients in all 50 states plus nearly a score of foreign countries. It offers a mutual fund in excess of two million dollars, a record of successful investments that tops even the esteemed Dow-Jones graphs, and a bimonthly newsletter that is read by more than 4,000 subscribers throughout the United States.

The firm had its origins in the meeting in 1962 of two financially minded and trained men, Charles Schwab and Desmond Mitchell.

The pair found themselves in agreement that there was a need for a major investment company in the Bay Area. And they also agreed that it should be headquartered outside the major financial centers, "away from the rumors and the pressures."

THEY CHOSE Marin County

INVESTMENT INDICATORS and Research Management Co. of San Rafael is a young firm with young key personnel. The president is dynamic Charles Schwab, shown above during a pause in the preparation of the bimonthly newsletter. Vice president is Don Johnston, seen below on the direct "hot line" that connects the San Rafael office with New York City's Wall Street.

Schwab, now president of the firm and the holder of a master's degree from Stanford University's Graduate School of Business, notes that by both living and working in Marin, Investment Indicators personnel make a big saving in time by avoiding a daily commute trip.

And modern communications have eliminated any handicap that might have accrued from the decision to locate away from the hubs of financial activity.

SCHWAB POINTS out that the firm maintains a direct telephone line to Wall Street so that he and members of his staff can contact New York instantly by merely lifting a receiver. There's no necessity to dial. Immediately upon the lifting of the receiver, a voice from the floor of the stock market snaps out an acknowledgement and is ready with the answers to any questions or to supply any data.

Another indication of the thoroughly modern approach of the San Rafael firm is its two computers located at opposite ends of the country, to check and double check analytical reports and findings.

Schwab has developed a series of market indicators which have proven themselves through numerous market cycles.

"WHILE THE record speaks for itself," he says "it is always difficult at first to get clients to accept advice based on the indicators because quite often they must go against their emotions as well as against what others tell them they should be doing."

He explains that his indicators sound a "warning call" at approximately the same period during each market cycle to enable investors to determine the approximate duration of the cycle and so plan the all-important timing needed in business transactions.

Investment Indicators tries to cater to people who have at least two hours a day to spend on the market, according to Schwab, and the operation of the firm is geared to the professional investor or to the individual who handles his own account in a professional manner.

THE COMPANY is both dynamic and conservative, Schwab claims, explaining: "An investor should have at least five to 10 stocks with equal dollar value spread in his portfolio. For those with limited funds, but an interest in the market, we say get a mutual fund. For $500 a person can start his own portfolio and add money as he desires."

The bimonthly newsletter — largest of its type on the West Coast — offers sharp insights into the market, is often quoted on radio and in newspapers because of its high degree of accuracy.

Schwab entered the financial world at the age of 12 in Santa Barbara when he opened a corner lemonade stand. He has been interested in the stock market since shortly after that event, and while an undergraduate at analyst.

HE MAJORED in investments and prepared a graduate thesis of 120 pages on the aluminum industry. (He also found time, while at Stanford, to meet his future wife, Susan. Today they reside in Lucas Valley with Sandy, 4, Virginia, 5, and Carolyn, 8.

In the young firm, Don Johnston serves as vice president,

Bob Fargo as assistant director of research, John W. Lucas as assistant portfolio manager and Marjorie Wegner as assistant treasurer and security analyst. Co-founder Mitchell is now the chairman of the board.

Daily the officers, both individually and in staff meetings, pour over hundreds of reports, recommendations and suggestions, as they careful analyze every phase of the market.

As for the current market, Schwab notes: "It is way out of hand in speculative areas now and, at the moment, Investment Indicators is being very conservative. During recent months there has been fear of inflation and most individuals are trying to move into stocks and will pay almost any price."

AND IF IT still seems strange for a firm in San Rafael to receive daily requests for information and assistance from throughout the world, Schwab takes it all quite calmly.

He looks out of his window at the rolling Marin hills and thinks of the pressures of Montgomery Street. Then he says, "It's nice to be able to see the trees as well as the forest."

The Fight To Save Our Soil

Conservation District Has A Leading Role

By DON KEOWN

The whole history of man has been a sorry one of abuse and waste of his most precious resources.

Even such essentials to his very existence as the air he breathes, the water he drinks and the earth upon which he stands and from which he gains his food has not escaped his neglect and mistreatment.

Fortunately, though belatedly, mankind is demonstrating a growing awareness of the predicament he is imposing upon future, yet unborn generations.

SOME CORRECTIVE steps have been taken, and others are taking shape.

In the United States, where soil erosion and depletion began to take their toll in colonial days with the clearing of the forests and the tilling of the fields, there were those few who took early notice of the trend and sounded an alarm.

Patrick Henry is credited with saying: "He is the greatest patriot who fills the most gullies."

George Washington and Thomas Jefferson were also among those concerned with the problem.

IT WAS, HOWEVER, not until the 20th Century and the administration of dynamic Theodore Roosevelt that the American government really started to come to grips with the issue. Roosevelt called a conference of governors to consider conservation measures, and one outgrowth was the establishment of the U.S. Forest Service.

There followed a lag of interest in soil conservation, despite the efforts of such men as H. H. Bennett, a farsighted government scientist, to call attention to the destructive erosion that was taking place.

In 1929, Congress stirred itself to the point of establishing soil conservation experiment stations where soil and water losses could be measured and corrective actions studied. Ten such stations began accumulating information.

UNDER ANOTHER Roosevelt, Franklin Delano, the United States again moved seriously to halt, or at least to slow, the wastage of the earth. In 1933, a soil erosion service was established under the Department of Interior, with Bennett as its chief.

Then came the worst dust storms in American history. When dust clouds from the Midwest reached even Washington, D.C., it had a sobering, even frightening, effect upon congressmen and all Americans. Public Law 46, the first soil conservation act in U.S. history, was enacted.

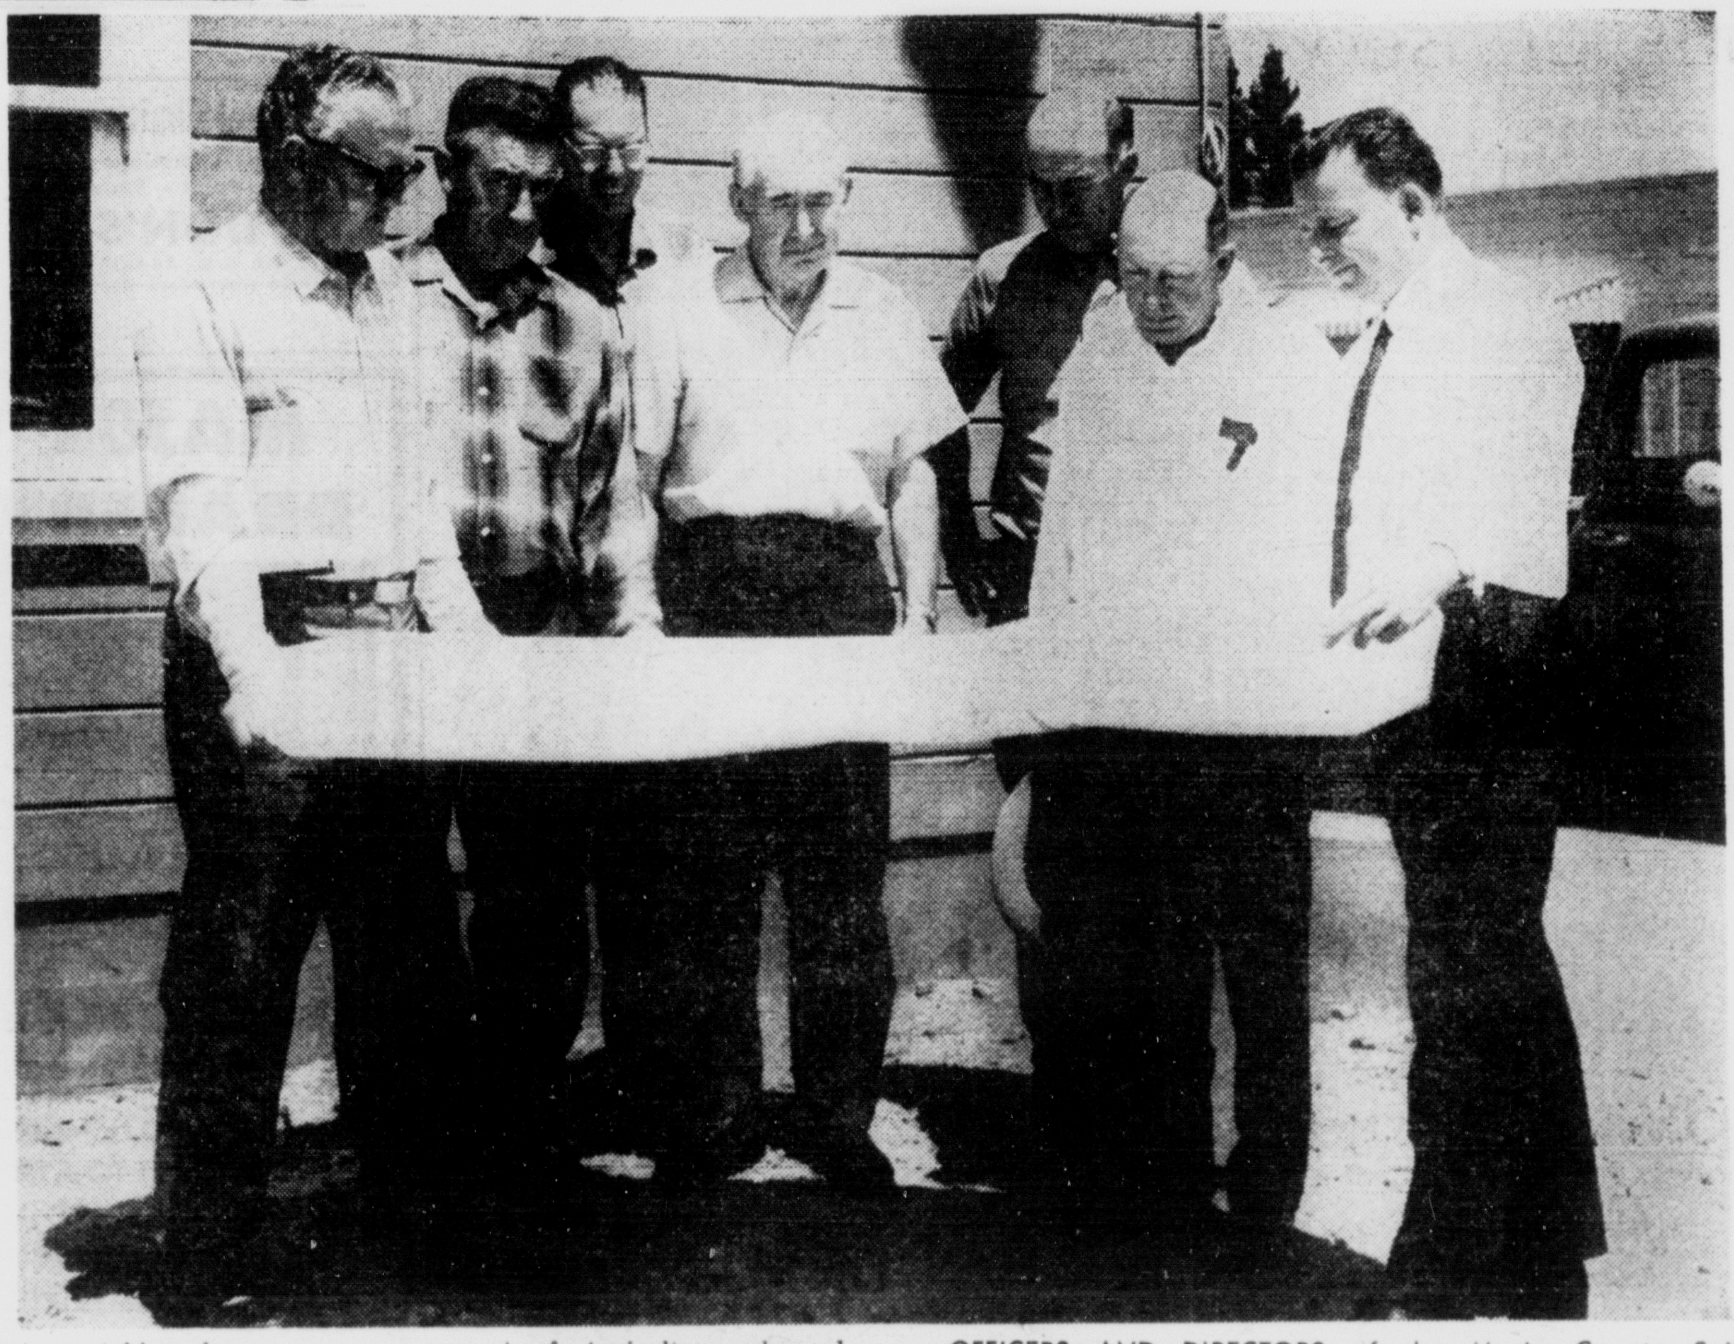
It replaced the soil erosion service with a soil conservation service under the U.S. Department of Agriculture, charged with responsibility for carrying out in cooperation with farmers a program demonstrating erosion control and proper land use. Labor was made available from the new Civilian Conservation Corps.

THERE THEN began a limited program of projects in representative watershed areas that was later extended to cooperative work with specific farmers.

Early in 1937, President Roosevelt wrote state governors urging the adoption of state legislation authorizing the organization by farmers of soil conservation districts as governmental subdivisions to carry on the anti-erosion efforts.

By 1948, all states and territories had passed such measures.

With the formulation of soil conservation districts, the U.S. Soil Conservation Service then shifted its emphasis to cooperation with those agencies, largely by providing the services of one or more technical experts to each district.



OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS of the Marin County Soil Conservation District assemble outside the district offices in Point Reyes Station to examine the Marin County general soils report which the district sponsored. Left to right are Waldo Giacomini, board president; Louis Albini, the secretary; Jim McGuire, Soil Conservation Service soil conservationist; Matt Klemmer, recording secretary; Tom Furlong, director; Dave Leveroni, director, and Mogan Ring, engineer with the Marin County Department of Public Works. Absent was the fifth director, Domingo Grossi.

IT WAS NOT until the spring of 1959 that the program finally reached Marin County.

Why so tardy? Apparently, because the officials in charge have been cautious and careful not to appear "pushy" on behalf of the program. Soil conservation districts have been formed only by a vote of landowners and at the behest of a "grassroots" demand on the part of the local farmers.

In the summer of 1959, the first Marin County Soil Conservation District program was adopted. Since then, the district has functioned quietly but effectively.

THE PROGRAM has been given a valuable continuity by the fact that all five of the original directors are still with the district. Waldo Giacomini is the president, Domingo Grossi Jr. the vice president and Louis P. Albini the secretary. Thomas F. Furlong Jr. and David Leveroni Jr. are the other directors.

Matt H. Klemmer serves as recording secretary.

During its existence, the district has had a number of resident conservationists assigned by the U.S. Soil Conservation Service. At present, James A. McGuire occupies that position.

HE HAS THE assistance of four other personnel from the service — an engineer, a soil scientist, an engineering aid and another conservationist — who divide their time between the Marin district and other districts.

Board meetings are held on the second Thursday of each month at 10 a.m. in the Grandi Building, Point Reyes Station, where the district has its office.

The Marin County district covers 295,000 acres, or virtually all the rural acreage in this 330,000-acre county. The larger cities and more populated outskirts are excluded.

THE DISTRICT estimates that some 230,000 acres are in some form of agricultural use, the overwhelming portion of it as pasture or range for dairy or beef cattle. Only about 10,000 acres are devoted to crops, and less than a thousand acres are under irrigation.

The initial policy statement adopted by the board in 1959 outlined the district's principal objectives as the control of soil erosion, the prevention of flooding, improvement of range land, management of forests, conservation of arable lands, the implementation of watershed projects, the drafting of a comprehensive district-wide program, and the carrying out of education and public relations for soil conservation.

The intent to prepare annually a work plan with special reference to cooperation with the Soil Conservation Service was also announced.

THIS YEAR the district announced a limited shift in its

"Can My Chiffon Dress Be Drycleaned?"

Cleaning chiffon is hazardous even to the most expert drycleaner. Chiffon, formerly only silk, is now woven from all fibers. It is light and sheer, designed for free-flowing beauty, but is susceptible to yarn slippage and snagging; shrinkage; distortion or stretching; loss of color; and ringed areas from perspiration and wear, especially in sized chiffon which may be water soluble.

Chiffon can be drycleaned, but remember, the loose-weave, sheer yarns weaken with normal wear and such wear may not be noticed before cleaning. If the chiffon has been sized, as many have been, the garment may shrink, stretch or become distorted due to the loss of the sizing. Even the mechanical action of drycleaning may cause this change.

You can see that for all its beauty, chiffon is a fragile fabric. Its cleaning hazards are many. Your drycleaner, even with special care, may have difficulty cleaning it to your satisfaction and his. But if it is possible to clean your chiffon, he can do it.

Soil Conservation Program In Marin Wins Commendation emphasis "toward a more comprehensive approach to the environment," stressing, however, that all the original objectives still remain.

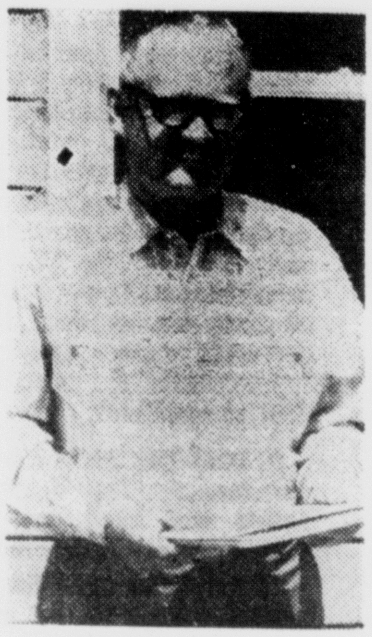
The new emphasis means, says Giacomini, "that land, water, vegetation and wildlife will all be considered together as necessary parts of living space, including non-agricultural interests."

The district president continues: "Although agriculture will still be our primary concern, the plans we make from now on will also recognize such problems as water quality and quantity for all public needs, open space as a necessity for good living, the over-all value of a clean and beautiful appearance for the countryside, and the benefits of land and water as sources of healthful outdoor recreation."



KEY FIGURE in the soil conservation program in Marin County is Waldo Giacomini, one of the original directors of the Marin County Soil Conservation District and board president.

WATERSHED projects, he notes, are taking on an increasing importance due to the pressures of expanding populations.

"Those pressures call for careful planning," he asserts, "especially where damsites must be reserved now before they become too costly, and prospective reservoir areas set aside before developments occur that would make them so expensive that their future acquisition would be uneconomical."

As illustrative of the district's concern with water matters, Giacomini points to its cooperation with water and flood control districts of the county in speeding up plans for water conservation works in the Walker Creek Basin.

THIS IS TO be a $50,000 project, with half the funds expected to come from the California State Soil Conservation Commission and the other half from the Marin County Flood Control and Water Conservation District and the North Marin County Water District.

In the past, state grants have helped to finance a preliminary

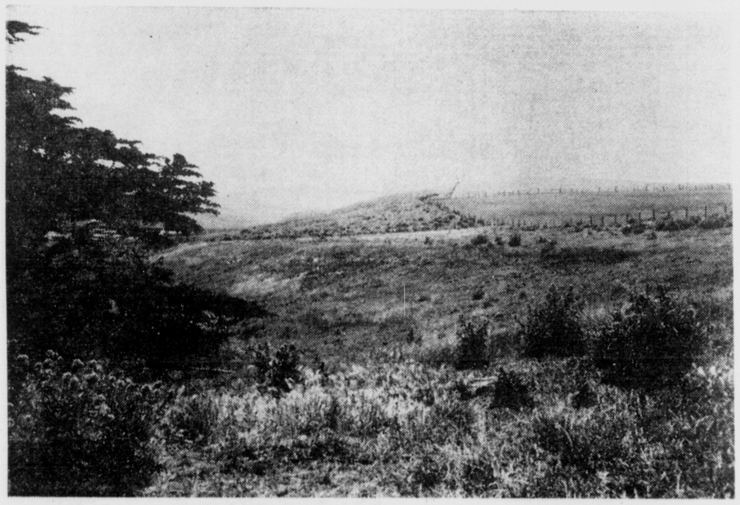
Conserving Marin County's Soil



"HE IS THE GREATEST patriot who fills the most gullies," said Patrick Henry nearly two centuries ago. Just how effective gully control can still be as an erosion-control measure is demonstrated dramatically in the two photographs above. At top, a scene of gully erosion visible from the main road between Inverness and the Point Reyes Lighthouse. In lower photo, the same general area after a Marin County Conservation District program has brought the gully under control.

study of causes of sedimentation and erosion within the Tomales Bay watershed, and then a more detailed probe of and plan for conservation of the sub-watersheds of the San Geronimo Valley and Walker Creek.

The district has also announced henceforth it will pay increased attention to the issue of land taxes, working for legislation that will permit the continuation of agriculture as a profitable business enterprise and a way of life. The assessment of rural lands so that the rancher can continue to conserve his property and improve it is essential for posterity, the district maintains.

GIACOMINI AND his fellow directors also hope for a more active and successful public relations effort in the future.

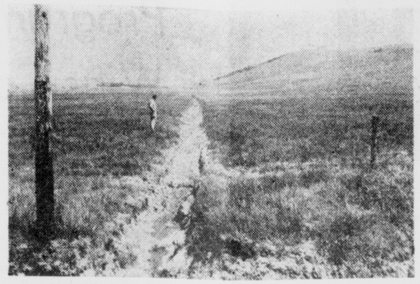
"One of the main things we hope to convey to the public," Giacomini says, "is the great value of agriculture to urban people.

"It will be necessary to 'sell' the idea — based on facts that seem obvious to us farmers, but aren't always so obvious to city-dwellers — that what is good for agriculture is also good for the townspeople.

"The message we must strive to communicate to them is that ranches are one of the best ways, and one of the cheapest ways, to keep watershed lands safe for future generations. I am speaking of watershed here in its broadest sense, to include open space for scenic values and for the preservation of unpolluted air."

THE DISTRICT admits that it has not always found itself in complete agreement with other Marin County conservation groups.

Whereas such organizations are dedicated to what the district says is sometimes a "mere preservation" philosophy, the directors say they must keep in mind "that it is our principal goal to improve and manage land resources for the maximum economic benefit to our people, rather than to promote the mere setting aside of resources with little or no development."



ONE OF THE SIMPLEST soil conservation measures is an open drain with earthen bottom, such as this one dug to carry water down a slope via a single channel.

Nevertheless, the directors feel the district is making a substantial contribution to the conservation cause in Marin County.

SINCE THE formation of the district, it is claimed, "there has been a gradual but definite improvement in the county's soil, watershed value, pasture and range resources, and wildlife."

The district and cooperating ranchers and farmers have had a large hand in this, they say. "We, the directors, believe that the district has been a good thing for Marin County."

Last year it added 13 new cooperators holding 6,500 acres to its rolls, bringing the new totals to 204 cooperators with 123,769 acres.

The 1967 annual report showed seven cooperators had been assisted in developing conservation farm plans for 3,540 acres, bringing the totals to 138 plans for 88,045 acres. Consultive services had been provided during last year on 28 occasions to groups and individuals.

A LIST OF conservation projects in which the district was involved in 1967 included nine farm ponds, nine recreation development programs for private lands and two for public lands, two protective diversions, two irrigation sprinkler system installations and 12 spring development jobs.

Pasture and hay land management programs were worked out for 1,433 acres, improved pasture planting for 303 acres. Streambank protection was afforded for 2,480 feet, and 456 feet of tile drainage were installed.

"Land now considered adequately treated" was listed as 12,239 acres.

ONE OF THE district's major achievements in 1967 was the completion of a standard soil survey and report requested by the Marin County Planning Commission for 25,000 acres in the Nicasio area.

A similar soil survey is under way for the Bolinas Lagoon watershed.

While the district is authorized to levy a tax, it has never done so. Instead, the district has received an annual grant from the Marin County general fund, averaging $1,000 a year. Most of this goes toward a modest salary for the recording secretary and to the operating expenses of the district.

A small program of equipment rental to the cooperating ranchers is being "phased out."

GIACOMINI AND the other directors point with pride to the good working relationship the soil conservation district has maintained with other agencies, federal, state, local and private.

The district president sees as one of the program's most difficult hurdles for the future the surmounting of "the indifference barrier."

There is a lamentable tendency on the part of some landowners and people generally to regard conservation work as less important than other things, he believes.

"Sometimes the awakening comes only after the damage has been done and it is too late," he says.

BUT, SAYS Giacomini, the board, the district and Soil Conservationist McGuire all hope through their dedication and enthusiasm to generate among the apathetic an awareness that the problems of soil erosion and soil depletion are serious threats to the public welfare in America and in Marin.

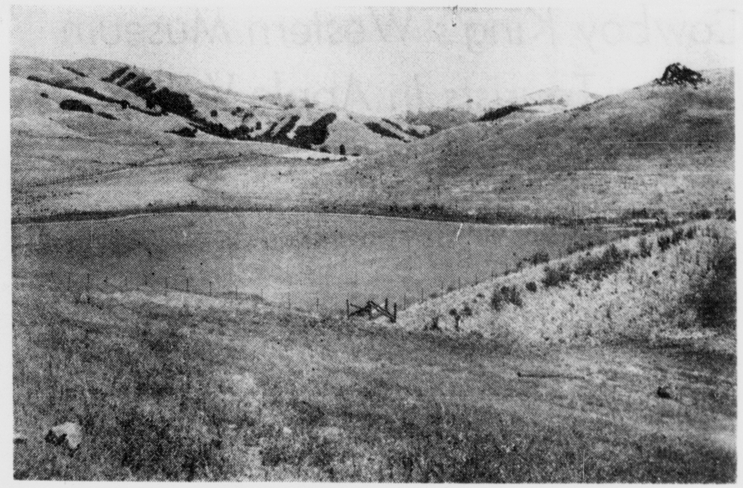
Recognition of those efforts and intentions came recently in the form of a letter from Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman to Giacomini commending him and the other members of the governing body of the district and its personnel for their past work and for their updated program for the future.

"The district movement has gained enormous strength over the past quarter century because you and other dedicated men have given freely of your time, energy and imagination in the finest tradition of democratic action and self government," the cabinet member wrote.

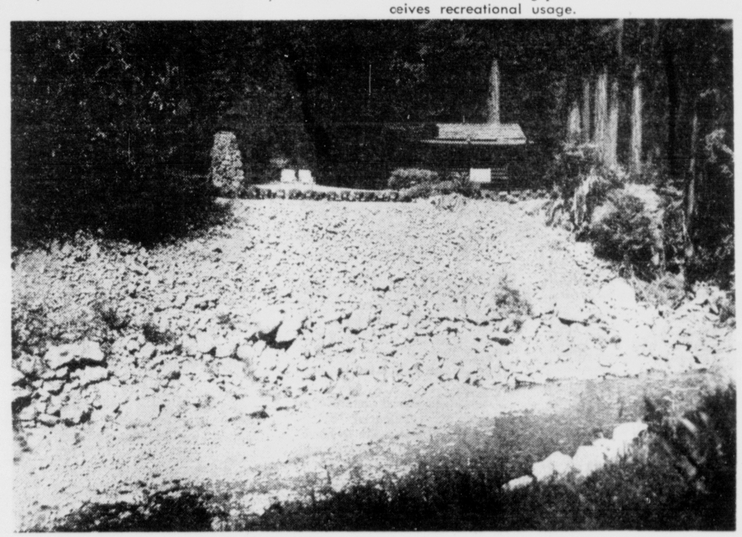
IN CONCLUSION, Freeman predicted: "We are on the threshold of a new era in the management of our resources — of land and water, forest and wildlife — by our people. I am convinced that your district has an important part to play in giving reality to our broadened concepts of conservation and rural areas development.

"I urge you to push forward in every way you can conceive to achieve maximum advancement in the conservation and economic development of our soil and water resources within your district."

Which is just what Waldo Giacomini and his colleagues propose to do.

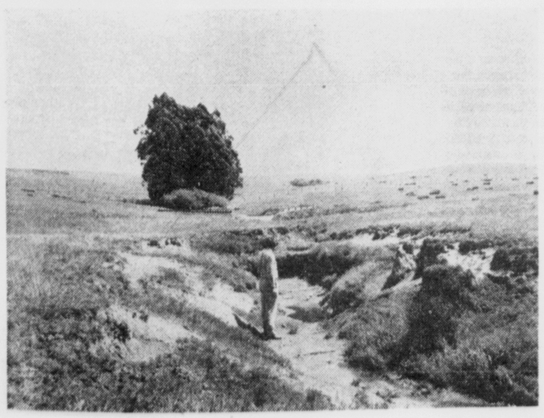


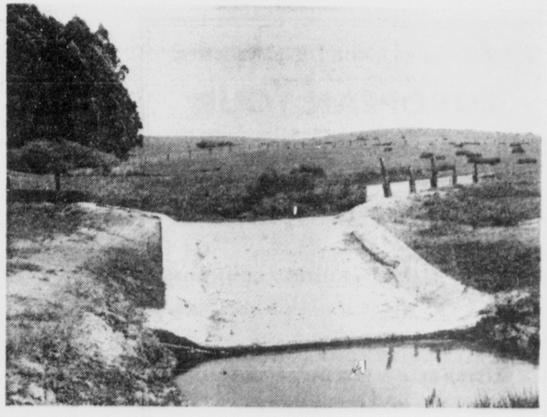
FARM PONDS such as this one on the Tom Rogers place near Nicasio are among the accomplishments of the Marin County Soil Conservation District and its cooperators. Not only is the pond a conservation asset, but it also serves as a watering place for livestock and receives recreational usage.



A RIP-RAP JOB of stone along the embankment of this small stream in the Nicasio-Forest Knolls area provides protection against erosion when swift currents rush down the waterway following heavy rains.

THE DIFFERENCE THAT a well-planned and carefully-executed soil conservation program can make to the land is shown strikingly in these two photographs. At left, an area of native pasture unimproved. At right, that same general vicinity after an improvement program. In the field is Linden Brooks of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service. He is a conservationist who divides his time between the Marin County Soil Conservation District and neighboring districts.





SOMETIMES AN EROSION condition can call for special corrective measures. At left, an uncontrolled gully has eaten away at the soil of this Marin County pasture. At right, a cooperative Marin County Soil Conservation District project has installed a drop structure of cement to carry off the water without additional erosion. The washing away of the earth and its nutrients has been halted. (Marin County Soil Conservation photos)

Cowboy King's Western Museum Draws Tourists In Apple Valley

Mementos Run From Stuffed Horse To Guns And Boots Of Movie Heroes

Roy Rogers' Museum at Apple Valley, Calif. might well be titled "This Is Our Life" for it contains thousands of items collected by the cowboy actor, his wife Dale Evans and their family throughout the years.

Designed to resemble a western stockade on the exterior, the walk-through museum first displays, wax figures of Roy and Dale, she at a piano and Roy holding his first guitar. Both are in western attire appropriate to their fan-bestowed titles of "King and Queen of the Cowboys and Cowgirls."

"Trigger," undoubtedly the world's best known horse, was mounted following his death in 1965, and appears in surroundings remindful of the 87 movies starring Rogers and 101 television programs starring both Roy and Dale, in which he appeared during his 33 years.

AMONG THE saddles on display are Roy's $50,000 gold, silver and rubies creation, the one he rode in many Tournament of Roses Parades, as well as those of other western stars, all close personal friends, such as Buck Jones.

Various authorities have valued the Rogers' collection of longhorns, on display throughout the museum, as the world's largest and finest.

Gun buffs will enjoy especially Roy's collection, including one which belonged to his late friend Clark Gable.

SPECIAL AREAS are set aside for trophies from Roy's numerous hunting expeditions, ranging from African sable antelope to a world's record class polar bear Roy shot in Alaska in 1960. Many are set in diorama backgrounds which give the animals an aura of natural habitat.

A virtual avalanche of sports trophies testifies to Roy's proficiency in trap and skeet shooting, boating, raising of pigeons, dog trials and fishing. Nearby are awards from his 4-H activities.

Boots seem to have a special niche in Rogers' memory, for his first cowboy boots are bronzed and on display. The museum also contains a shoe repair shop and boot exhibit, possibly stemming from Roy's first job as a youngster in a Cincinnati shoe factory.

THERE ARE even a complete blacksmith shop and a trapper's cabin.

Citations to Roy and Dale, both as a couple and as individuals, are numerous and come from a wide range of organizations. Two are Doctor of Humanity degrees from Bethany College.

Dale's particular interest in religion is evidenced by a special room set aside to honor the major faiths, done through the display of a variety of religious items.

WHILE TRIGGER Jr. and Buttermilk occupy individual stalls, other modes of transportation are also exhibited such as the 1923 Dodge stake truck in which Rogers came to California in 1930, "Nellybelle," the famous jeep seen in the Rogers' television series, and Roy's specially designed western convertible, decorated with hundreds of silver dollars, longhorns and guns.

The museum does not "belong completely" to Roy and Dale, however, for they have included exhibits in memory of their children, Debbie, Robin and Sandy, each containing articles entwined with their individual lives.

Roy's sentimental nature shows through with a collection of miniature dolls which belonged to his mother, Mrs. Martha Slye. Begun during her early years, the collection was added to by her devoted son who brought her unusual dolls from the numerous countries and states he visited during her lifetime.

WHILE MOST of the memorabilia is of their lives as individuals and as a family, Roy and Dale have included other displays which are of broader interest, such as an exhibit of Indian costumes and headdress, a desert scene, a rock collection and a number of Masai spears and shields from Africa.

There's even an area set aside for live birds of different varieties.

Located opposite Rogers' Apple Valley Inn, the museum has become a "must see" tourist mecca, especially for those traveling the famous "Route 66," since it is located but a few miles away, on California State Route 13.

Island Vacationers Are Looking East To The Caribbean

West Indies Challenges Hawaii For Holiday Trade From Marin

There was a time when going to "the islands" meant just one thing to Marinites — a trip to Hawaii.

Hawaii remains a very popular vacationing spot with residents of the county. But a good many of them are also turning their sights eastward and thinking of the Caribbean when they make vacation plans.

This is particularly true for those who have been to Hawaii, and are looking for something different this time. The islands in the Caribbean will give it to them, for all of them have something exotic and enjoyable to offer.

FOR THE cost-conscious traveler, the best time to visit the Caribbean is during the so-called "summer season" which extends from mid-April to mid-December at most islands.

Hotel rates drop an average of 20 per cent as do costs for many other facilities and activities such as yacht charters, rental cars, scuba instruction and big-game fishing trips. Furthermore, facilities are less crowded and it's easier to get transportation and accommodations of your choice.

The summer climate is sunny and delightful, averaging a degree or two higher than in the winter.

MOST VACATIONERS jet their way to the Caribbean, often at surprisingly low air fares.

For example, the round-trip night jet fare from New York to Puerto Rico is $90, probably the lowest per-mile cost for direct air travel in the world. The trip takes less than three and a half hours.

Although New York and Miami are the major jet gateways, you can fly in nonstop from other cities such as Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Atlanta. Direct one-stop jets are offered from St. Louis and Cleveland.

THERE ARE several islands not served by direct flights from New York. For example, you can jet non-stop from Miami to Grand Cayman in the Cayman Islands in 70 minutes for $59 round-trip. Also, excursion fares such as $91 round-trip from Miami to Haiti often are much lower than excursion fares from New York.

Airlines serving the Caribbean from U.S. cities include Pan Am, Eastern, Trans Caribbean, BWIA, BOAC, KLM, Air France, Delta, Viasa, Air Jamaica and Avianca. If you're planning an island-hopping trip, service throughout the region is offered by local airlines such as LIAT, Caribair and ALM.

Major steamship lines have scheduled 29 cruises from U.S. ports in August, 15 in September, 21 in October and 27 in November. Most are from New York, but there's a good selection from Miami and Port Everglades in Florida.

COUNT ON $40 daily per person, double, as the average rate for a good room on a luxury liner; thus $400 for a 10-day cruise, $480 for a 12-day cruise. Minimum rates for most cruises are much lower, but not many rooms usually are available at these rates.

If you book early enough, you may get an inside room for $30 a day per person, or less.

On most Caribbean cruises, even minimum rate rooms have private bathroom and air conditioning.

YOU WON'T be in your room much of the time anyway, because pleasure cruises offer a full round of meals, snacks, activities and entertainment close to 24 hours daily with dancing, music and drinks at "night owl" clubs.

The cost of accommodations is a big variable.

On some islands you'll find small guest houses where the daily charge is as low as $6 including meals. On the other hand, top luxury resorts charge up to $25 daily in the summer and higher in the winter for room, double occupancy, and two meals.

Therefore, two weeks for room and meals can cost as little as $84 — or well over $350. For first class beachfront accommodations and meals, count on a minimum of $12 to $15 daily at most islands. Add $5 to $10 daily for the luxury resorts.

THE ISLAND you choose is another factor, although a limited range of hotels from budget to luxury is available almost everywhere.

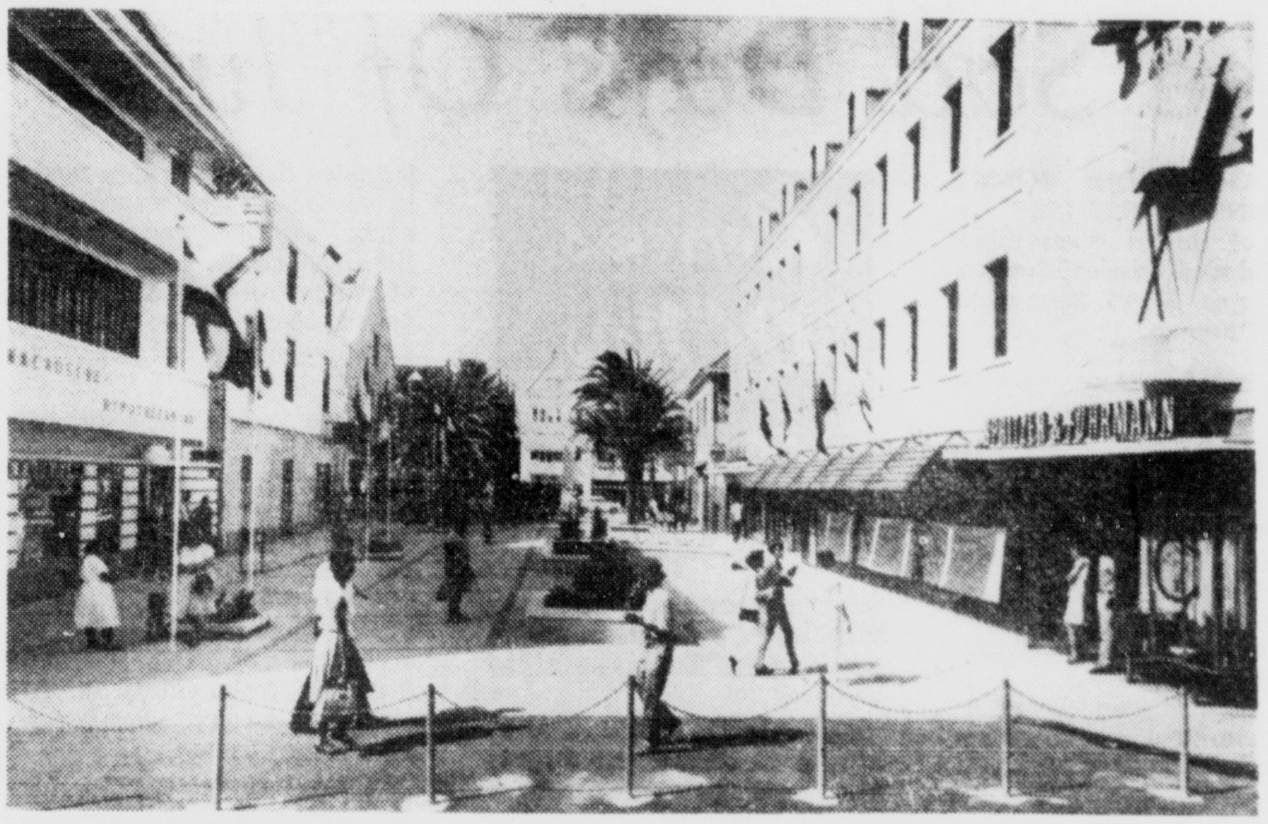
Generally, choice hotels at popular islands charge a little more than hotels of similar class at off-beat islands. It's a matter of supply and demand. The current demand is for rooms at luxury resorts in islands with well developed facilities for sports, nightlife, casinos and good duty-free shopping.

One of the easiest ways to visit the Caribbean, and often save money too, is to take advantage of the special package tours offered by travel agents, airlines, and individual resorts. No matter who you are — a single, a golfer, an angler, a honeymooner — you can find a tour tailored to your needs.

Many personal factors enter into the cost of a Caribbean vacation.

WILL YOU bet a bundle at the casino? Will you go the shows at plush clubs every night? Will you rent a yacht, a sailfish boat, a car or a horse? Will you go on a big-game fishing trip, a scuba expedition, play golf or a hike up a jungle clad volcano?

These are some of the available extras that make the Caribbean a great vacationland.



THE MAIN shopping plaza of Helfrichplein in the Dutch colony of Curacao in the Caribbean has been closed to automobiles and converted into a colorful mall, complete with caged tropical birds and sidewalk cafes.

The Sad Days Of June

ASSASSINATION: ROBERT F. KENNEDY 1925-1968 by staffs of United Press International and Cowles; Cowles, 272 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Reviews Of New Reading

The first of what may soon be a torrent of books on Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and his untimely fate, this account of the June 5, 1968, murder and its immediate aftermath has been compiled from United Press International dispatches.

Some of those stories are reprinted in whole, some abridged, some summarized.

The result is good enough as journalism, but it does not surpass in the general quality of the writing what you read regularly in your newspaper.

There are exceptions. For instance, UPI's Louis Cassels demonstrates again that he is not only a superb reporter but also the equal of any of our heralded men of letters in the art of literary expression.

If the text is weakened by repetition and irrelevancies, the photographs, also UPI, are heart-wrenchingly poignant, even those, or perhaps especially those, that confront the journalist with the old and troubling questions of ethics and taste where the camera lens is intruding into the privacy of the bereaved.

Certainly the book is moving enough to reopen the wounds and renew the grief of those of us who supported and believed deeply in Bobby Kennedy.

Does this serve a useful purpose? Would not America be better off if these bitter and sad memories were interred along with the body of Robert Kennedy? One needs only a few seconds of thought to answer affirmatively to the first question, negatively to the second.

There are too many signs that in the brief period since his death, Americans, leaders and followers alike, have already forgotten those vows they made in the midst of their mourning to carry out the principles of Robert Kennedy. Note the fate of gun control legislation for example. Apparently we can stand some reminding of this unfinished business.

As for those Kennedy admirers who now profess uncertainty as to which of the surviving aspirants for his party's presidential nomination the late senator might have favored, a reading of a single excerpt from his last speech to his campaign workers, thanking them for their efforts in his California victory, should suffice:

"I also congratulate Senator McCarthy and those who have been associated with him. . . . The fact is that all of us are involved in this great effort. And it's a great effort not on behalf of the Democratic Party; it's a great effort on the part of the United States, on behalf of our own people, on behalf of mankind all around the globe and the next generation."

Nowhere will be found any corresponding identification with the policies and goals of Hubert H. Humphrey.

First Novel By Behrman Has Too Much Of Everything

THE BURNING GLASS by S. N. Behrman; Little, Brown, 396 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

S. N. Behrman, distinguished playwright and essayist, has at the age of 75 published his first novel.

If one is to judge by this curiously old-fashioned ramble, he has been well advised to avoid fiction all these years.

It is set in Behrman's own element — the international world of the arts, music, theater, Hollywood — that he must know in and out. Yet it persistently rings false, like the script of a bad 1930s musical movie.

The story opens in the Salzburg Festival, when the Nazi menace was beginning to darken Europe, but this theme soon blurs and dims and is abandoned altogether in the entanglement of personalities that covers the pages.

There is just too much of everything. Two lovely young heroines pregnant out of marriage, two suspected murders, two suicides — just to skim a few events off the top in passing. Not since Charles Dickens has such abundance been crammed — and so loosely! — into one novel.

The pivot for all this is Kaetchen, the nominal hero's best friend and sponsor in the great world. Kaetchen is a saintly Jew who is tireless in the service of his many friends. He arranges their marriages, finds them jobs, prevents their suicides, and so on.

Improbable as he sounds, when he is on stage the story does move.

As for the hero, a clumsy young playwright who changed his Jewish name on the way to success, he is given to constant, bungled love affairs, and worse, constant soul-searching. Since neither activity is at all convincing, he becomes quite a burden.

But he is only one of many. Whenever the action sags, as it does frequently, Behrman reaches out and plucks off another character, complete with biography and supporting cast, to toss into the melee that becomes more and more disjointed and confusing, as it rambles toward the abrupt, untidy ending.

One can't help wondering why a writer of his stature bothered with such nonsense.

A Polish Poet Clears Clouds From The Past

NATIVE REALM by Czeslaw Milosz; Doubleday, 300 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

Now professor of Slavic literature at the University of California in Berkeley, Czeslaw Milosz is one of the very few Polish poets known to this country.

This book, "a search for self-definition," is not an autobiography, although fragments of his eventful, not to say sensational, years in Eastern Europe, Paris and as a diplomat in Washington are included.

As he explains, he is attempting to reconcile the circumstances that tossed him "from one civilization into another, from high-pressure areas into low and vice versa. New images canceled out none of the old and strictly speaking, I do not see them in chronological order but in parallel, colliding with one another, overlapping . . had made it necessary to connect the marchland of Europe where I was born not only to the rest of the continent but our whole age."

He includes therefore only personal events that are significant to his quest, stressing instead the political and religious background of his marchland. Since these complicated matters are cloudy in most Western minds, one welcomes this clarification, and the perceptive and imaginative conclusions he draws.

Engrossing as it is, it is anything but light summer entertainment. His meaning is often difficult to grasp at first reading.

Perhaps one can blame the translation (by Catherine S. Leach) for some of the difficulty, but Milosz' mind is a subtle, truly poetic mind, and puzzling out the deeper passages is well worth the effort.

Modest Poetry

PROXIMITY by William Huff; Four Winds Trading Co., 56 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Norman Moser.

Huff, like many a local poet, probably tired of waiting forever for national publishers to come to his aid, and has put out his own collection of his work. It's only pretentious in format, being an attractive hardback.

As poetry, it's modest.

That is, William Huff may not soon be heralded as the century's new genius of poetry. His poems are not particularly sensational, and most are not especially lyrical. These are the poems of a fledgling craftsman, a poet of statement, of personal observation and sincerity.

I particularly enjoyed "Substratum," "Navigation," "Reconoiterer" and "Velocity." Most readers will.

When It Comes To Tennis, You Can't Beat An Aussie

ADVANCED TENNIS by Paul Metzler; Sterling, 188 pages. Reviewed by Don Keown.

As its title advises, this is no book for the beginner.

But if you want to move beyond the fundamentals, to polish your strokes and technique, to master court strategy, to control and utilize your temperament, then this is a sound and rewarding book.

Paul Metzler is a veteran Australian player and coach who has a knack for expressing himself as well as a thorough knowledge of the game, and who doesn't talk down to his students. Nor is he one for wasting time.

A more famous Aussie, Lew Hoad, writing the introduction, describes the book as "wonderfully instructive and entertaining." Australian Davis Cup selector Esca Stephens chimes in: "It is a grand book — one that makes a great contribution toward improving tennis wherever it is played . . . "

And who's to argue with the Australians when the subject is tennis?

A Constricted World

BLOODLINE by Ernest J. Gaines; Dial, 249 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

San Francisco State College graduate Ernest J. Gaines has written his third work of fiction, a collection of five stories about his native Louisiana.

A Negro, Gaines writes deftly of the rural plantation dwellers who live in "the quarter" and labor in the fields, defining their heroism and cowardice within the boundaries of their experience. While all the stories are effective, the longest, "A Long Day in November," is perhaps the most memorable, as it carefully details the problems and hopes of a small family, from the viewpoint of the 6-year-old son, as a struggle to maintain human values in a constricted, subsistent little world.

Maybe Gaines should have called his collection "How It Was."

The Permissive Vs. Authoritarian

By DON KEOWN

RAISING YOUR CHILDREN by Frank R. Donovan; Crowell, 248 pages, $5.95.

NORTH VIETNAM: A DOCUMENTARY by John Gerassi; Bobbs-Merrill, 200 pages, $5 clothbound, $2.25 paperback.

A favorite scapegoat of society these days for its difficulties is the permissive parent.

The conservative, in particular, is prone to blame "coddling" by parents, or by schools, or by courts, for social turmoil, especially that involving young people.

The permissive parent, however, has an ally in the behavioral scientist. That such support has not diminished under attack is demonstrated in Frank Donovan's "Raising Your Children," a summarization of the findings and theories of psychiatry, psychoanalysis, psychology and related fields.

The book is not intended as a guide directing parents down a single path, but rather as a road map from which they can select their own route and alternatives. Still, the signpost is there, and it very definitely points toward permissiveness as the preferred thoroughfare.

"It is difficult to find a scientific study that endorses parental dominance," Donovan reports.

And later: "It is interesting to note (from a study) that the most favorable type of adolescent personality was the product of permissive family training with no family conflict. The other desirable type of personality resulted from strict family training with some rebellion."

Parents, Donovan writes, are confronted, according to behavioral scientists, with a choice between child-rearing practices that generally produce a submissive conformist, or methods that produce a reasonably aggressive individualist. Most parents would prefer submissive children who would then grow up to become independent, self-reliant adults, but the combination is ruled out as an impossibility.

Scientific theory leans toward an even greater degree of permissiveness than is common in most homes. The scientist, in other words, would encourage, rather than suppress, the "constructive deviant, safeguarding him against the efforts of a stultifying society to control or tame him.

The old permissive vs. dominance argument is the fundamental issue in Donovan's book, but not the only child-rearing question he takes up. He covers the field broadly, and offers separate chapters dealing with each age group from prenatal through adolescence.

While the so-called behavioral scientists frequently disagree among themselves, Donovan can point out some areas of agreement. They agree, for instance, that more important than the degree of discipline or punishment exercised by parents is its consistency. They agree, too, that "the most important influence in child development is the parent-child relationship, and the vital factor here is the attitude of the parent, not the child."

Critics of permissiveness will not be convinced by the arguments of the behavioral scientists, for they are as disdainful of psychology, psychoanalysis and psychiatry as they are of permissive parents and progressive education. Advocates need no convincing, although they will be encouraged by this support at a time when they are generally on the defensive. Undecided parents, torn between the new and the old ideas, will receive an easily comprehended, persuasive indoctrination into the former. They will have no difficulty in finding rightwing politicians and other conservatives willing and eager to give them the other side of the picture.

SAN FRANCISCO State College has had its share and more of controversial characters the last few years, none of them more involved in dispute than John Gerassi, the faculty member who was as activistic as any of the students in the campus unrest and uproar.

His enforced departure from the school caused some sighs of relief on the part of the establishment, although it quickly became apparent that the spirit of rebellion had not departed with him.

Gerassi has written a book, not about the skirmishes at San Francisco State, but about a much more serious and bloodier conflict, the strife in Vietnam.

"North Vietnam: A Documentary" is based largely upon Gerassi's observations when he visited North Vietnam at the outset of 1967 as a member of an investigative body from Bertrand Russell's International War Crimes Tribunal. These he supplements with interviews and with documents.

In many eyes, both Gerassi, off his "wild man" reputation at San Francisco State, and the tribunal, also on the grounds of prejudgment and bias, are suspect. There will be an inclination to give little weight or credence to the report. Indeed, Gerassi makes no claim to objectivity, despite his earlier background as a newsman with the New York Times, Time and Newsweek.

But still, Gerassi was there. And he is meticulous in naming places, dates and people. Furthermore, he is able to point out that others more entitled to the supposition of objectivity—Harrison Salisbury, for instance — saw much the same thing.

And what Gerassi saw was ghastly. His prime method is to present first the claims of the Hanoi government as to the results of American bombing upon that country, and in especially horrifying detail upon its civilian population, and then to describe the follow-up investigations made by the tribunal representatives within the limits their time schedule permitted. The answer invariably was confirmation.

Of secondary interest to Gerassi were the statements of South Vietnamese in Hanoi relating atrocities they allegedly had suffered at the hands of the Saigon forces, and sometimes claiming American acquiesence.

Gerassi offers a final conclusion that the North Vietnamese people, despite widespread suffering, are committed to the struggle, firmly convinced that their cause is a patriotic one and that they are resisting an aggressor.

Even allowing for Gerassi's strong convictions and for his past radical actions, the book is still pretty bitter medicine for an American public already having great difficulty in swallowing and stomaching an unpopular war.

PUBLISHED by Time-Life Books, "Election Watcher's Companion 1968" is a $1 paperback that offers a quick history of American campaigns, conventions and balloting, brief explanation of our political processes, and some analysis of the 1968 candidates and prospects that is helpful though hardly of any really great depth.

THIS ELIOT PORTER photo of the Matinicus Island waterfront off the coast of Maine is taken from his "Summer Island: Penobscot Country," first published in the Sierra Club Exhibit Format Series and now available as a $3.95 slightly abridged paperback version from Ballantine Books. The bargain edition contains 160 pages, including 41 black and white and 48 full color photographs of the dramatic and beautiful Maine coastline.

Sleuths & Suspense

KILL IS A FOUR-LETTER WORD by Aaron Marc Stein; Doubleday, 192 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Donald G. Davis.

Stein's favorite sleuth, Matt Erridge, faces death, terrible trouble and terrible corruption from an evil and wealthy family aboard a ship sailing from France to the U.S.

Trouble starts early, in just getting baggage from the boat train to the boat, because Erridge notices everything that is out of place — like the good shoes and perfect trouser cut of the steward. It was no steward, and there the trouble starts.

And the family — grandfather, daughter and granddaughter — is no ordinary family. There's money and power all the way through, and based on blood.

To the steward and the family add one other character — a female German industrialist with a build like a beer mug, but wreathed in lace.

Among them Erridge becomes ensnared in a bloody plot. Stein keeps his hero on his toes, trying to save his own neck while delving into the mystery that holds the family together even in murder. An excellent Crime Club selection.

Books For The Juniors

The hero of "The Adventures of Wuffle" (McGraw-Hill) by Audrey Erskine Lindop is a warm and friendly animal.

His trouble is that he is sometimes mistaken for a rabbit, which he resembles despite his rounded ears. So to clear up the misunderstanding, he decides to become something important — like a lawyer. His friend the tortoise, is agreeable to becoming one with him. Except that neither knows what a lawyer is. They set out to learn the answer, and adventures follow.

It is a humorous story of warm friendships in Lost Woods.

A difficulty is that the cast of characters is a bit too many and becomes hard to follow. The Wuffle, however, is well developed as a character. He and his friends will appeal to younger children, and William Stobbs' illustrations will help them to remember the inhabitants of Lost Woods.

Some other recent books for junior readers:

Clear drawings and diagrams plus lucid writing make Dr. Homer E. Newell Jr.'s "Space Book for Young People" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) a valuable and fascinating book. Dr. Newell manages to explain the scientific complexities so even adults can understand them.

Marinite Charles Einstein, author of a number of successful sports biographies, has chosen a particular favorite of young Bay Area baseball fans, ex-San Francisco Giant Orlando Cepeda, as the subject of his "My Ups and Downs in Baseball" (Putnam's, $4.95). Young admirers of "the Baby Bull" won't want to miss this lively book.

OLD FRIENDS, AND XANADU

It being summer and not particularly warm, you take a vacation.
You find disappointingly that you can go home again to Lake Erie.

You come back swiftly to the places and crepe-paper relics,
where you played half-hearted football and wrote four-syllable words for Flag Day.

They being old friends now older,
ask you what's it like, out there,
as if at least an ocean bulged between here and there.

They ask about Hippies, Reagan and Mays.
About cloverleafs, couples black and white,
boys and boys, and Carol Doda's dooh-dahs.
How far is it to Hollywood, Disneyland?
Is the Golden Gate Bridge really gold?

I said the usual things, being a little afraid,
and they being old friends.
But I wish now that I had whispered
In a cobweb voice:
"It is Xanadu."

I wish, old friend, dear friend, that I had told you differently:
This is the place,
soft-scented and brutal,
where old men carry balloons, and the grass is full of wrinkled children.

I should have told you about Market Street on Sunday, when it is empty of bright yellow tractors,
a concrete desert of voices here and there.
I once saw a Chinaman in a business suit spit hopefully about the end of the world on the middle of a silent street-car track on Sunday.
And on Thursday, I saw the old men in their thrift-shop suits, watch the scarred buildings crumbling and crushed with a terrifying calmness.
And not to forget, that one Wednesday morning, around ten.
A wino on Geary Street pinched a lady and she didn't drop one piece of her groceries.
It is Xanadu.

It comes down to making lists:
Deer on ridges, girlie dervishes,
the worried DAR, ocean wind like no other wind, nude-ins and dude-ins, free love and corner love, and no love at all.
It is Xanadu, the place of the uncertain tomorrow.

Fires burn bright here,
lighting barricades and barbecues.
Bodies wash up here under the gold,
like fisheyed, drained dreams:
Heavy casualties here, my friend.
It is the place of the lingering, unshakably gaudy dreams
from which there is no waking.

It is like this, dear friend:
High above and around the Wells-Fargo building, straight over bay and bed-white sails, around fishing holes and manholes, swirls and dips an incredible beautiful calliope, scented with sea and holy water, colored shockingly deep and bright.
It's picking up riders.
It is Xanadu. Out here.

Old friend, I would leave you wrapped in red crepe-paper, dipped in the incense of children.

On The Stereo Scene

The Cream Of The Crop Among The Latest In Rock

By JOHN SUNIER

From a tentative start reviewing only an occasional Beatles or Stones album, this writer suddenly finds himself inundated by rock LPs.

Clapton and Pig Pen vie for turntable time with Copland and Prokofieff as the deluge of generally worthwhile rock increases in quality and quantity at the same time. Here is a quick survey of some albums that have turned me on recently, as well as some interesting failures, too.

CREAM OF THE CROP: Of course, we have to start with the latest Beatles offering "Magical Mystery Tour" — a thoroughly delightful musical display of the Beatles best work since the Sgt. Pepper LP.

While not as well-constructed around a theme as the Pepper album, "Magical Mystery Tour" (Capitol SMAL 2835) has 11 tunes that reach high levels of creativity. Best of those from the television show is "Fool on the Hill," but two others on the disc but not in the show are "All You Need Is Love" and "Penny Lane." The latter features a superb French horn obligato and never fails to give me a shiver.

An illustrated booklet on the TV show is bound in the album.

This is another one especially suited to stereo headset listening. Absolutely wild special effects.

The next-to-most-recent Rolling Stones album, "Flowers" (London PS 509) has no over-all theme idea, just a smashing collection of Stones hits: "Ruby Tuesday," "Have You Seen Your Mother, etc.," "Lady Jane" and others. Again, there are a number of ornaments provided by classical instrumental soloists which heighten the variety and excitement.

I WAS SORRY to hear the Buffalo Springfield had broken up, because their LP "Buffalo Springfield Again," (Atco SD 33-226) is one I find myself listening to more frequently than most. "Hung Upside Down" is a terrific number, but the six-minute "Broken Arrow" is one of the most amazing creations of the rock movement to date as far as I'm concerned. It is one of the first rock compositions to employ long silences as an integral part of the music — a borrowing from some contemporary longhair (whoops! serious concert) music. Sound effects are also a part of the total effect.

Don't miss this gem of an LP.

A new LP by the magnificent Paul Butterfield Blues Band is always an event, and their latest, "The Resurrection of Pigboy Crabshaw," (Elektra EKS-74015) deserves attention for such strong and gutsy modern blues as "One More Heartache," "Pity the Fool," and Albert King's "Born Under a Bad Sign." Paul's harmonica work is among the best to be heard.

The recent LPs of Judy Collins deserve equal attention for their lovely choice of songs, deeply felt lyric delivery, and exciting production. In addition to songs by some of her favorites, such as Leonard Cohen, Judy is now composing some simply gorgeous ones of her own — try "Albatross" on this LP.

OF COURSE THIS is not rock but it's certainly not pop or folk either. Hearing only the ballata by Francesco Landini one might think it is a classical album. Judy doesn't make it on the Landini, by the way, but one flop on such a wonderful album is forgivable. (Elektra EKS-74012)

A return to the big band sound is heralded by the LP "Child Is Father to the Man," (Columbia CS 9619) featuring Blood, Sweat and Tears. Again, added instruments, sound effects and classical influences are part of the musical results.

Al Kooper does most of the vocals against the big band backing. Some of the best are "My Days Are Numbered," and "Somethin' Goin' On."

Another new group on the same label makes an exciting splash musically — The Electric Flag. In "A Long Time Comin'," (Columbia CS 9597) they combine blues, soul, rock, jazz, country, throw in jazz sax section, sitar and Moog synthesizer and wail like nobody's business.

Guitarist Mike Bloomfield is originator and leader of the aggregation.

"You Don't Realize" is a soulful number really well done. The stereophonics are something else, especially on headsets.

THE "NEW" OR post-accident Bob Dylan has a voice that is smoother and more musical than formerly, working against a simple background, frequently only guitar and harmonica. This is more like his first albums rather than the later hard rock-backed effects released prior to his near-fatal accident.

"John Wesley Harding" (Columbia CS 9604) may be a letdown at first, but careful listening will soon bring most Dylan fans around. I must admit if I never hear the one about Frankie Lee and Judas Priest again it'll be too soon, but beauties like "I'll Be Your Baby Tonight," make up for that lengthy bore.

Continuing with the "Cream of the Crop" picks, Ars Nova is another new group (Elektra EKS-74020) in which classical elements appear, as well as a gentle folksong approach somewhat akin to Judy Collins.

The complete lyrics are printed in the new "Unipak" album and are very welcome.

Among the classical elements are short entractes between the longer tracks, devoted to half-a-minute worth of Monteverdi or Machaut. Then there is the incredible version of Richard Strauss' opening theme to "Also Sprach Zarathustra," (see 2001: Space Odyssey). What's most incredible is that it works!

NOW FOR SOME fun, try one of the best of the several groups who are satirizing the 1920s and 30s sound — The Bonzo Dog Doo/Dah Band (Imperial LP-12370).

The LP is titled "Gorilla," and dedicated to King Kong. The recreation of the tight-collared 20s tenor in "Jollity Farm" is amazingly true. There's even old Ethelbert Nevin's "Narcissus," and for an up-to-date instrumental a strikingly attractive harpsichord solo, "Music for the Head Ballet." And don't forget the enclosed handy 12-page free Gorilla Booklet!

Another fun group that really rocks is Salvation, formerly The Salvation Army Band, or was it Banned? Anyway, their first LP (ABC Records S-623) is a kick throughout.

More harpsichord, not to mention electric mandolin.

Some of the goodies: "Love Comes in Funny Packages," "The Village Shuck."

Salvation is a local group, and so is The Loading Zone — a very soul-music sounding quintet of Bay Area boys joined by a great gal belter-outer, Linda Tillery. Their new Victory album (LSP-3959) has more consistency from track to track than many first efforts. It sounds especially clean and uncluttered, yet generates a lot of excitement musically.

"No More Tears," and "I Can't Please You" were my choices.

JUDY COLLINS
Some gorgeous music of her own

CREAM MADE A big bang when they first formed, due to the terrific performing skills already exhibited by its experienced members, Eric Clapton, Jack Bruce and Ginger Baker. "Disraeli Gears" (Atco SD 33-232) is the best-selling of their LPs and for me also the best.

The 11 tunes encompass such chart hits as "Strange Brew," and "Tales of Brave Ulysses." Nearly all are original tunes by the trio, and the over-all sound is not deficient in the least for having only three performers in charge.

Atlantic Records has done so unusually well in the rock and rhythm and blues field that they have two sampler LPs in release now devoted to hit tracks by their various groups and artists.

The second, "The Super Hits Vol. 2," (Atlantic SD 8188) is a real winner with a dozen of the very best, among them The Rascals' "Groovin,'" Wilson Picket's "Funky Broadway," and the Buffalo Springfield's thought-provoking "For What It's Worth."

ONE OF THE two super hits by Atlantic's girl Aretha Franklin, "Chain of Fools," is the first of 10 tracks on Aretha's recent LP "Lady Soul," (Atlantic SD 8176). This swinging gal's blues have such wide appeal that rock, country, Motown, and old staid pop music fans are turning on to her genius simultaneously. Atlantic gives her the best instrumental backing and sound balance imaginable for rhythm-blues results that are always at the top of the list.

This was just the best of the crop of rock; later we'll survey some of the lesser lights among the new releases in this field.

A Lovely Lemon Tree

Southern California, not Northern California, is generally considered America's citrus country.

But Marinites have one big advantage over many citrus-lovers of the Southlands. They can grow the dwarf Meyer Lemon, one of the showiest members of the citrus family.

Its planting is prohibited in some of Southern California's prime commercial citrus areas to prevent its carrying of a disease to which it is especially susceptible into the orange, grapefruit and lemon orchards.

MARINITES, however, can grow it without restriction, and without any special plant disease worries. In fact, it is one of our hardiest selections in a generally hardy family.

The Meyer Lemon has many attractive assets, including a luxuriant green foliage, fragrant white blossoms and golden yellow fruit that are carried through much of the year.

It also has a variety of garden uses. Most often, in Marin, it is seen as a patio plant in a redwood tub or similar large container on the patio. It can be used as a foundation planting, or even as a hedge.

IT IS IMPORTANT that the dwarf Meyer Lemon be planted where it will receive sunshine all, or at least a good part, of the day. With abundant sun, the fruit will ripen into a pleasing flavor somewhat milder than the regular lemon.

The most common error of Marin growers is to under-water their Meyer Lemon, especially when the tree is growing in a tub. They do require a considerable amount of water. It is best to sprinkle lightly frequently, and then to intersperse deep waterings less frequently.

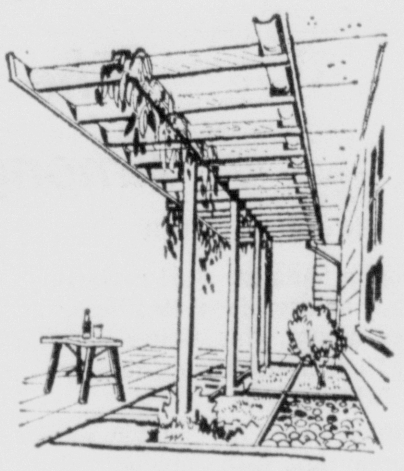
GOLDEN YELLOW FRUIT is only one reward from the Meyer Lemon grown in a redwood container on the patio. It will also produce for your enjoyment fragrant white blossoms and a luxuriant green foliage. (Photo courtesy of the California Association of Nurserymen)

An occasional feeding with a balanced fertilizer is also advisable, especially for tubbed trees, since the nutrients are then more easily washed from the soil.

NO PRUNING is required, since the Meyer Lemon is self-shaping and naturally attractive.

Marin nurserymen report that the Meyer Lemon rates right up there with the dwarf orange and dwarf tangerine on the citrus popularity charts in this county. And, they add, its growers are seldom disappointed by their choice.

AIR CONDITIONER



AUGUST and September are the months when Marinites wish they had more shade in their yards. This trellis built onto the roof eaves not only provides that shade, but also helps to keep the interior of the home cooler on hot days. The trellis is built of red cedar two-by-sixes with four-by-four posts. Clematis is a good choice for the vine to drape over the top and complete the sunshade. A planted strip of earth between the house and patio adds a further cooling touch.

Don't Spare Water When You Start A New Groundcover

August can be a good month to start that groundcover in Marin.

The only qualification is to be liberal with the water. Keep that newly planted cover good and moist.

This means sprinkling it lightly several times a day with the garden hose through the first several weeks.

AS FOR WHAT groundcover to plant, Marinites have a wide selection from which to choose. Only a few can be mentioned here.

When most Marinites talk of groundcovers, they are thinking of those that hug the earth. Creeping Thyme, Ornamental Strawberry and Potentilla are examples.

All are fast-growers.

Thyme will almost literally grow in cement, so adaptable is it. Small purple flowers in summer and a delicious fragrance when crushed underfoot are among its qualities.

THE STRAWBERRY has a lovely foliage, and a special knack for filling in without becoming obnoxious.

Potentilla, least-known of the trio, has leaves that are tiny and of an unusual shape. Its foliage is bright green, and it sports small, bright yellow flowers.

A step up in height is a California native, Point Reyes Ceonothus, that will spread over several feet while remaining comparatively close to the ground. Periwinkle is another intermediate height grower with heart-shaped leaves of deep green, and beautiful lavender-blue blooms.

IN THE three-foot-high-class is the Pyracantha Santa Cruz or Spreading Firethorne, with a spread of nearly eight feet and fall and winter berries. Rock-roses might not be considered groundcovers, but on slopes and hard-to-water locations, they do the job.

Your nurseryman can provide a variety of other ideas for groundcovers. But it will be up to you to provide that all-important water.

Aristocrats For Your Landscaping

Members of the Podocarpus family just have to be classed as garden aristocrats. They are distinctive in the landscape, providing a texture and gracefulness unequalled by any other.

There are many members of the family for Marinites to consider, all well suited to our area.

Podocarpus macrophylla (Yew Pine) is probably the best known. It is unsurpassed as a door-side planting, where growth can be kept columnar. The leaves are long and narrow, yew-like in appearance, and a shade of green all their own.

Fern Pine is a smaller-leaved family member. Its foliage is softer and more feathery with a fern-like appearance.

Both Fern Pine and Yew Pine may be used as espaliers against a wall or fence.

Nurserymen can show you several other Podocarpus varieties including Podocarpus nagi, a tall grower with broader leaves, and Podocarpus macrophylla maki, a shrubby Yew Pine. The Podocarpus gracilior is another popular variety similar to Fern Pine. The leaves are longer than those of the Fern Pine, but the texture and delicate appearance are the same. It is at its best in coastal gardens.

You never know whether to call Podocarpus family members shrubs or trees. Technically, they are trees.

Foliar Feeding Gains Favor With Marin Green Thumbers

You'll be hearing more and more about foliar feeding.

In fact, for many Marinites, it's an already well-established practice.

What foliar feeding means is that plants are fertilized by spraying them with soluable fertilizer. The practice offers a fast and efficient way to boost growth and yield.

Greenhouse proprietors and nurserymen have been doing it for decades. Home gardeners are only beginning to really adopt the technique.

MARIN NURSERYMEN advise, however, that foliar feeding is a supplement to, not a substitute for, regular feeding of the roots through the soil. It should not be used to replace entirely the latter time-honored and proven practice.

For while plant parts above the ground absorb nutrients more rapidly, the roots will absorb them in greater quantity.

Nurserymen suggest that foliar feeding be considered especially when:

1. The plant is newly-planted and the roots are just beginning to get their first growth in the soil.

2. In the early spring, the plant is undergoing its most rapid and most crucial growth period.

3. The plant is recuperating from injury or from disease.

FOLIAR FEEDING is also useful when a particular nutrient is needed, such as the correction of a copper or zinc deficiency.

Gardeners are advised, however, that foliar feeding requires certain fertilizers especially designed for such application.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- If you are planning an August vacation trip, be sure to soak your garden thoroughly, and leave written instructions with the person who is going to watch over your plants. For houseplants, a good idea is to leave them in the kitchen sink after a complete soaking.
- If you are staying home, keep up a regular schedule of deep watering. Marin soil is unusually hard and dry this summer, and lawns and plants are suffering.
- Heat-loving annuals such as marigolds, cockscomb, zinnias, petunias and dwarf dahlias may still be set out for bloom in a few short weeks, but time is starting to run out.
- For simplified summer-time weed control in lawns, make use of the lawn foods in which weed-killing chemicals have been incorporated.
- Feed camellias, azaleas and rhododendrons again this month with a complete acid food, and water them in well.
- Cut back delphiniums when the flowers fade. In Marin, you'll be rewarded with a new crop.
- Now's the time to start that winter vegetable garden. Visit your nurseryman and see what he has to offer.

PERFORATED hardboard offers you an easy and neat way to provide tool storage in your garage and still leave room for the automobile.

Giving The Garage Back To The Car

Handyman's Page

A garage is a shelter for automotive vehicles, it says here.

It is also a place to clutter up with screens, lawn furniture, barbecue equipment, garden supplies, mowers, bicycles and almost anything else you can name. In many cases, as a result, the car sits in the driveway because there simply isn't any space for it in the garage.

One way to make room for the auto is to put wasted wall space to work. With "working walls" of quarter-inch perforated hardboard, the garage can become a spacious, neat and well-organized year-round storage center.

THESE HARDBOARD panels are perforated with holes that accept hooks and hanging hardware from which you can hang innumerable items; ladders, extra tires, garden hoses, tools, etc. By setting brackets in the perforations, you can also put up handy storage shelves.

Everything stores off the floor, out of the way and not subject to dampness.

Most hardboard panel manufacturers make quarter-inch perforated panels for use as garage liners. These heavier duty panels, which have holes slightly larger than lighter-grade panels, permit use of special hardware suitable for the heavy equipment often found in garages.

THE PANELS are available in a wide variety of sizes including standard four-by-eight-foot panels.

Perforated hardboard panels are available in natural brown color, preprimed, prefinished or V-grooved. They can also be obtained perforated to within 32 inches of the bottom for an attractive wainscot effect. Where extra strength or extra protection against moisture is needed, use tempered hardboard.

Installing the panels is not difficult. Hardboard can be worked with ordinary carpentry tools.

INSTALL THE panels over open studding or over one-by-two-inch furring nailed horizontally on 16-inch centers. Leave a three-eighth-inch clearance behind the panels to permit the insertion of hooks and brackets.

When installing panels, never butt them tightly together. Just bring them to moderate contact, with the space of a matchbook cover between, so there will be room for any natural expansion.

For fastening, use screws or ring-grooved nails spaced six inches apart. Waterproof cartridge type adhesive may also be used to eliminate surface nailing.

NO PAINTING is required with prefinished hardboard, but you may want to paint unfinished boards. A primer and two coats of a good grade paint will do the job.

On pre-primed boards, you may apply finish coats.

If you are painting garage panels, here's a hint: color code them for handier storage with one color for the panels where you'll store garden equipment, another for tool storage, and a third for sports equipment.

YOU'LL FIND that working walls give you a bonus of storage space in the garage. Tools and supplies are more accessible, and since you'll have a designated space for storage, you will find it easier to return items to their proper place after use.

You'll also take pride in the neat, attractive appearance of your garage interior when the garage door is open.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Sometimes. But, not always. If your living room is next to the dining room, a table or two of the same design as your dining set lends continuity to your decor. But you really can mix colonial, rural English, contemporary and Spanish; Oriental and modern, provincial French with anything. That is . . . IF it's done with finesse. Come see our many collections and individual, unusual, one-only tables. We'll help you mix and match—with finesse!

Should your living room tables be FOUR-OF-A-KIND?

This room had: royal carpet, turquoise and gold accessories . . . multihues of blue on chairs and sofa. It was pretty but somehow lacking. The lady asked us for ideas. What we recommended was a bit of shock! Bright red flocked paper on one wall, red velvet draperies over sheer white trimmed with sassy red tassels, red mats on the pictures, a tall cabinet in a red finish and mucho red pillows. Our little girl blue is now happy as a singing cardinal.

Any room problems can be solved with professional assistance. Call us. Maybe your red room needs some blue.

Hundreds Of Men, Tons Of Equipment

The National Broadcasting Co.'s news task force of 837 persons assigned to the gavel-to-gavel coverage of the Republican and Democratic national conventions will be supported by 65 tons of equipment.

And that is only one of the three major networks that will be so committed.

NBC correspondents Chet Huntley and David Brinkley, anchormen for television, and Russ Ward and Peter Hackes, anchormen (with Bill Ryan as analyst) for radio coverage, will lead a team of 682 newsmen and technicians at each convention.

In addition to this force there will 150 persons employed as office assistants, guides, guards, messengers, telephone operators and chauffeurs.

A CARAVAN OF 24 huge vans, composed of 18 tractor-trailers 40 feet long and six mobile units, has moved the 65 tons of NBC News equipment from New York to Miami Beach for the Republican convention, opening Monday.

After that convention, the vans will reload the equipment and take it to Chicago for the Democratic National Convention, which starts on Aug. 26.

The distance between Miami Beach and Chicago is 1,400 miles, which will take four days of travel. Because of the close start of the next convention, the NBC News fleet of trucks will have to follow a precise timetable. To guard against any delays, NBC has taken every precaution by setting up a series of repair check points along the route. Repairs will be made with almost the speed of a stock car race mechanic to keep the fleet moving and intact.

IN EACH convention hall a complete NBC broadcast center covering 24,000 square feet of work space will be constructed. In addition to television and radio anchor booths overlooking the hall, each center will include TV and radio studios, a newsroom, videotape facilities, a six-position switchboard, film developing laboratories, and a film editing complex.

NBC will also have six remote installations at the political party headquarters hotel as well as in at least four other hotels in each city where major candidates and delegates stay. Each of these units will be made up of a correspondent, producer, director, editorial coordinator and 15 engineers.

Also, three "crash" mobile units will cover comings and goings at airports, other transportation terminals, and certain other strategic points in the convention city.

AT BOTH CONVENTIONS, NBC will be using the newest electronic equipment, some of it developed expressly for this purpose.

Four new "ultra-portable" RCA Man-Pack Color Cameras will be used on the crowded floor of the convention halls, enabling cameramen to move freely to any part of the hall.

New, too, will be six small-head color cameras, "semi-portable." They can be carried, but are cable-connected.

NBC will be using in its full coverage 45 non-portable, cable-connected cameras which can operate in low-light conditions. They will be deployed in the convention hall, in hotels and at other strategic points in the convention cities. There will also be five non-portable color TV cameras in use by the broadcast industry pool.

IN ADDITION, NBC will have one live color camera in a helicopter that will take aerial shots.

Since color requires more power than black and white, there will be from 300 to 350 footcandles of light.

"High-band" videotape equipment will be new this year, providing super-color-fidelity and faithfulness of reproduction.

A new lightweight wireless microphone-receiver will be used by NBC television floor reporters for the first time during the conventions.

ALL NBC NEWS radio equipment will be portable and completely transistorized.

At each of the convention sites there will be about 50,000 feet of camera cable and 200,000 feet of wire for sound transmission.

The Columbia Broadcasting System is making comparable arrangements, and the American Broadcasting Co. somewhat less elaborate plans and facilities.

EDWIN NEWMAN, NBC news correspondent, demonstrates the lightweight wireless microphone-receiver newsmen of that network will be using in their coverage of the 1968 Republican and Democratic national conventions. They'll be in evidence next week in Miami Beach and starting Aug. 26 in Chicago. The network says the devices will afford their news teams greater mobility.

'Our Gang' Still Profitable—For Others

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — They were mischief makers and little rascals all right, but the story of the "Our Gang" kids is riddled more with tragedy than laughter.

Some 300 children belonged to the gang from 1921 until 1940.

Most remained a few years, outgrew their cuteness and moved on to obscurity. Others attempted to stay in pictures. Few succeeded.

SPANKY McFARLAND, probably the best known gang member, is a case in point. His button nose, high-pitched voice, chubby legs and cocky little waddle endeared him to millions. But it wasn't enough to inspire producers to hire him as an adult actor.

Today McFarland is a successful appliance and electronic salesman in Oklahoma City.

But Spanky was a lucky one. He survived.

Too many others did not. Scotty Beckett died earlier this year at age 38, the sixth member of the gang to die within the past decade or so, some by violence.

CARL "ALFALFA" Switzer was shot to death when he was 32 in an argument involving a $50 debt. Clifton Young, a tough kid in the early films, died in a hotel fire. Helen Parrish died of cancer when she was only 35.

Those who remain alive have scattered across the country to find work in other fields.

One of them, Mary Kornman still lives in the Hollywood area. She is the wife of Ralph McCutcheon who furnishes livestock, stagecoaches and wagons for movies and television. Mary was the first little girl in the gang, appearing in early silent versions.

SCOTTY BECKETT
In 1934 and in 1960

"ONCE IN A while I see 'The Little Rascals' on television and it's kind of spooky," she said the other day.

"My sister took over my role when I outgrew the part," Mrs. McCutcheon said.

"It was fun being a gang member. It was play. I have no regrets. When talkies came along the children sang and danced. We didn't have to be talented. Just kids. All we did was make big eyes and do reactions — which is natural for kids."

MRS. McCUTCHEON remains in touch with Johnny Downs who was with the gang from 1924-26. He now has a children's show on San Diego's KOGO.

"My group included Mickey Daniels (the freckle-faced kid), Alan Hoskins (Farina), Joe Cobb (the fat boy), Jakie Condon (with the tousled hair) and Mary Kornman," Downs recalled.

"I think we had a privileged childhood working in those films. It was fun and we got paid $60 a week. I was one of the least paid. Some kids got as much as $300 depending on their replacement value."

DOWNS STILL fondly recalls "Pete," the dog with the circle painted around his eye. There were several dogs used throughout the series history.

Today "The Little Rascals" and "The Mischief Makers" are seen in hundreds of cities on daytime television by the sandpile set. Toddlers are unable to comprehend that they are watching possibly the largest assortment of has-beens in entertainment history.

Of all the "Our Gang" members only Jackie Cooper went on to stardom. Currently he is an executive of Screen Gems, the video production arm of Columbia Pictures.

COOPER APPEARED in the series when he was about 7 years old before being spotted for "Skippy" and stardom in 1929. His contemporaries in the gang were Jean Darling, a fat boy named Chubby Chaney, a kid named Wheezer and Farina was still the Negro member.

"There was another girl, Mary Ann Jackson, with whom I was desperately in love," Cooper says today. "So far as I know none of the other kids stayed to make good in Hollywood, although others may be successful in other fields."

The "Our Gang" short comedy reels started in July, 1921, at the now defunct Hal Roach Studios in Culver City where Laurel and Hardy cavorted for the cameras.

Among the early stars was Darla Hood who was the sweetheart of the gang.

AT LEAST 80 films were made in the silent days.

JACKIE COOPER
One who made it big

Throughout the years Mrs. Fern Carter, who died recently, was the studio school teacher, tutoring the children for 23 years.

The little classroom contained such pupils as Stymie Beard, Buckwheat Thomas, Froggy McLaughlin and Shirley Jean Measures who later became a stripteaser billed as "Gilda and Her Crowning Glory."

Tough guy Mickey McGuire became Rev. Ben Griffith, a Los Angeles evangelist. Leat Artye Floz was mixed up in a bank-embezzling case. Mickey Daniles "Freckles" became a construction worker traveling around the world.

THE WHEREABOUTS of almost all the kids is unknown. But their names still ring a bell with old-timers: Porky Lee, Baby Patsy May, Dorothy DeBora, Ernie Morrison.

One gang member still around is Gene Jackson who played Pineapple for $75 a week. He still does some acting on the side but is more fully employed as a stand-in for the "Hatari" video series.

"I replaced Ernest Morris as Sunshine Sammy," said Jackson, a Negro. "After I left the gang I went into feature pictures and appeared with Mary Pickford in 'Little Annie Rooney.'"

JACKSON TOURS the country with his Jackson Trio, and wishes they'd known about residuals in the old days.

Hal Roach, the originator of the gang, says, "I don't hear much from the gang members. But Joe Cobb was the best fat kid we ever had. It was good fun, and audiences loved the kids. They still do on television."

The old gang is still earning a fortune — for other people.

Sandy Frank Program Sales Inc. of New York releases 78 different 15-minute episodes of silent "Our Gang" films all made by Roach under the title of "Mischief Makers" which are shown in approximately 50 markets.

MGM BOUGHT out Roach's interest in "Our Gang" and eventually developed the series into sound shorts. They are released as "The Little Rascals."
